THE utility of a Provincial Glossary, to all persons desirous of understanding our ancient poets, is so universally acknowledged, that to enter into a proof of it would be entirely a work of supererogation. Divers partial collections have been occasionally made, all which have been well received, and frequently reprinted; these are, in this work, all united under one alphabet, and augmented by many hundred words, collected by the Editor in the different places wherein they are used; the rotation of military quarters, and the recruiting service, having occasioned him to reside for some time in most of the counties in England.

Provincial or Local Words are of three kinds; the first, either Saxon or Danish, in a 2 general

Pomer

general grown obsolete, from disuse, and the introduction of more fashionable terms, and, consequently, only retained in countries remote from the capital, where modern refinements do not easily find their way, and are not readily adopted.

The second sort are words derived from some foreign language, as Latin, French, or German, but so corrupted by passing through the mouths of illiterate clowns as to render their origin scarcely discoverable; corruptions of this kind being obstinately maintained by country people, who, like the old Monks, will never exchange their old mumpsimus for the new sumpsimus.

The third are mere arbitrary words, not deducible from any primary source or language, but ludicrous nominations, from some apparent qualities in the object or thing, at first scarcely current out of the parish, but by time and use extended over a whole county. Such are the Church-warden, Jack-sharpnails, Crotch-tail, &c.

The books chiefly consulted on this occasion were Ray's Proverbs, Tim Bobbin's Lancashire Dialect, Lewis's History of the Isle of Thanet, Sir John Cullum's History of Hawstead, all the County Histories, and the Gentleman's Magazine: from the last, the Exmore dialect was entirely taken. Several Gentlemen, too respectable to be named on so trifling an occasion, have also contributed their assistance.

In selecting the words, such as only differed from those in common use, through the mode of pronunciation, were mostly rejected; nor in the arrangement, except in a few instances, are they attributed or fixed to a particular county, it being difficult to find any word used in one county, that is not adopted at least in the adjoining border of the next; they are therefore generally arranged under the titles of North, South, and West country words, distinguished by the letters N. S. and W. (when not at length). Words used in several counties in the same sense, are pointed out by the letter C. to express that they are common; and sometimes times these are distinguished by the abbreviation Var. Dial. signifying that they are used in various dialects. The East country scarcely afforded a sufficiency of words to form a division.

As the Local Proverbs all allude to the particular history of the places mentioned, or some ancient customs respecting them, they seem worth preserving, particularly as both the customs and many of the places alluded to are sliding silently into oblivion. For these Local Proverbs, I have consulted Fuller's Worthies, Ray, and a variety of other writers; many of whose explanations I have ventured to controvert, and, I hope, amend.

The Popular Superstitions, likewise, tend to illustrate our ancient poems and romances. Shakespear, in particular, drew his inimitable scenes of magic from that source; for, on consulting the writers on that subject, it will be found he has exhibited the vulgar superstitions of his time. Indeed, one cause of these scenes having so great effect on us, is their calling back to our fancies the tales and terrors of the nursery, which are so strongly stamped on our tender minds, as rarely, if ever, to be totally effaced; and of these tales, spite of the precaution of parents, every child has heard something, more or less.
and

The different articles under this head, that are collected from books, are all from the most celebrated authors on the subject. Among them are King James I. Glanvil, Dr. Henry More, Beaumont, Aubrey, Cotton, Mather, Richard Baxter, Reginald Scot, and Bourne's Popular Antiquities, as augmented by Mr. Brand.

Other articles on this subject, and those not a few, have been collected from the mouths of village historians, as they were related to a closing circle of attentive hearers, assembled in a winter's evening, round the capacious chimney of an old hall or manor-house; for, formerly, in countries remote from the metropolis, or which had no immediate intercourse with it, before newspapers and stage-coaches had imported scepticism, and made every ploughman and thresher a politician and free-thinker, ghosts, fairies, and and witches, with bloody murders, committed by tinkers, formed a principal part of rural conversation, in all large assemblies, and particularly those in Christmas holidays, during the burning of the yule-block.

In this Second Edition, the Reader will find the whole Glossary more regularly arranged, and in many places corrected, with the addition of near two thousand words; for many of which the Editor is obliged to Mr. Marshall's Treatises on Rural Oeconomy for Yorkshire, Norfolk, and Gloucestershire. The Topographical Proverbs and Vulgar Superstitions have also been corrected, and have received several additions, particularly the latter, from the well-known Poems of my ingenious friend Mr. Burns, the Airshire poet.

Since the printing of the first part of these sheets, a number of additional Provincial Words have been received from different quarters, or otherwise occurred; these have been thrown into an alphabet, and printed as a Supplement, at the end of the Glossary.

E N G L A N D.

IN compliance with FULLER's arrangement, I shall begin with those Proverbs which have reference to the whole kingdom: many of these, I must observe, are by no means complimentary, but seemed formed by foreigners from prejudice and misinformation.

ENGLAND.

LOCAL PROVERBS.

When our Lady falls in our Lord's lap,

Then England beware a $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \textit{sad clap,} \\ \textit{mishap,} \end{array} \right.$

ALIAS,

Then let the clergyman look to his cap.

THIS is supposed to be a kind of Popish prophetic menace, coined since the Reformation, intimating that the Virgin Mary, offended at the English nation for abolishing the worship offered her before that event, waited for an opportunity of revenge; and when her day, the twenty-fifth of March, chanced to fall on the same day with Christ's resurrection, then she, with her son's assistance, would inflict some remarkable punishment on the kingdom. This conjunction, it was calculated, would happen in the year 1722; but we do not learn that any thing ensued in consequence thereof, either to the nation, or the caps or wigs of the clergy.

When Hempe is spun, England is undone.

This was another Popish prediction, edited before the defeat of the Armada. The word hemp is formed of the letters H. E. M. P. E. the initials of Henry, Edward, Mary, Philip, and Elizabeth, and supposed to threaten, that, after the reigns of those princes, England would be lost, i. e. conquered. Fuller remarks, that, to keep this saying in countenance, it may pretend to some truth; for, on the death of Elizabeth, and accession of King James I. the kingdom, by its junction with Scotland, took the title of Great-Britain, by royal proclamation, and thereby the name of England was, in one sense, lost. Some interpreted this distich more literally, supposing it meant, that when all the hemp in England was expended, there would be an end of our naval force; which would indeed be fact, if no more could be procured.

*When the black fleet of Norway is come and gone,
England, build houses of lime and stone;
For after, wars you shall have none.*

This likewise seems to have a prophetic meaning, if one could but find it out. Fuller supposes it alludes to the Spanish

E N G L A N D.

Spanish armada, and quotes Sir Francis Bacon to prove that the sur-name of the King of Spain was Norway; but, supposing it was, nothing is explained by it; the number of wars in which England has been since engaged, as well civil as foreign, shew that this prophecy was dictated by a lying spirit.

England is a ringing island.

Fuller says it is so called by foreigners, as having more bells in number, greater in size, and better tuned bells, than any other country in Europe, Italy not excepted; although Nola, the place where bells are said to have been first invented and made, and whence they took their name, is in that country. Whether these assertions are strictly true, is a subject to be discussed by the Society of College Youths.

When the sand feeds the clay, England cries well-a-day!

But when the clay feeds the sand, it is merry with England.

The clay lands in England are, to those of a sandy soil, as five to one, and equally or more fertile. If, from a wet season, the sandy lands succeed, and the clay lands miss, only one fifth of the crop is produced that there would have been, had the contrary happened; this, as the proverb expresses, is a national misfortune.

E N G L A N D.

——— *England were but a fling,
Save for the crooked stick and the grey-goose wing.*

That is, England would be but a lost land, or not tenable, were it not for the bow and arrows.

This was a saying in praise of archery, in which the English formerly excelled; but the many battles gained by them, since the invention of gunpowder, shew that they are now as terrible to their enemies with the strait tube, as formerly with the crooked stick.

England is the paradise of women, hell of horses, and purgatory of servants.

The liberty allowed to women in England, the portion assigned by law to widows out of their husbands goods and chattels, and the politeness with which all denominations of that sex are in general treated, join to establish the truth of this part of the proverb.

The furious manner in which people ride on the road, horse-racing, hunting, the cruelties of postillions, stage-coachmen, and carmen, with the absurd mutilations practised on that noble and useful animal, all but too much prove the truth of this part of the adage. But, that this country is the purgatory of servants I deny: at least, if it ever was, it is not so at present: I fear they are rather the cause of bringing many a master to that legal purgatory, a gaol.

A famine

E N G L A N D.

A famine in England begins at the horse-manger.

If oats fail, there is generally a bad crop of every other kind of grain throughout this kingdom : indeed oatmeal makes a great part of the food of the poorer sort of people in the North.

The king of England is the king of devils.

The German emperor is termed the king of kings, because he has many princes under him ; the king of Spain, the king of men, from the chearful obedience shewn him by his subjects ; the king of France, the king of asses, from the patience of his people in bearing all the loads he is pleased to lay upon them ; but why the king of England is styled the king of devils, is not so apparent, unless on account of the constant jealousy Englishmen have of their governors, and their aptness to take fire at even the legal exertions of prerogative.

The English are the Frenchmen's apes.

However true this might formerly have been, the case is at present quite altered, and we have now, in our turn, the honour, if it is any, of dictating the mode to the French. It has moreover been observed, that the English have at all times been rather improvers of French fashions, than mere servile imitators of them, as may be instanced in the article of ruffles, which, though a Gallic invention, was much improved by the English addition of the shirt.

Long

E N G L A N D.

*Long beards heartless, painted hoods witless,
Gay coats graceless, make England thriftless.*

This satirical distich is said to have been made by the Scotch, in the reign of King Edward II. when elated with their victory at Stirling: it however serves to give us some insight into the dress of those times; shewing that the English then wore their beards, and hoods instead of caps. These hoods, Fuller says, were stained with a kind of colour in a middle way between dying and painting; whence painter-stainers have their name. That line which accuses the English of being heartless, was confuted at the battles of Flodden-Field, and Mulseborough. As to the gracelessness of the gay coats, I fear the case is not at present much mended; probably we should not find much grace, of the kind here meant, among the beaux of the present generation.

The English glutton.

This is another foreign sarcasm, arising from the envy of those who are obliged to satisfy their appetites with soup-maigre, frogs, and roots, instead of roast beef, pork, veal, mutton, and lamb. It is confidently asserted, by many accurate observers, that, with respect to quantity, foreigners greatly exceed the English in the article of eating, but that the English consume more animal food.

English

E N G L A N D.

English poke-pudding.

A jocular appellation given by the Scotch to the English, alluding to that national dish, a plumb-pudding. Poke signifies a bag; so that the sum and substance of the title is an English bag-pudding.

An English bug.

This is an Irish nick-name for an Englishman, founded on the supposition that the English first brought bugs into Ireland.

England is a little garden full of very four weeds.

This is said to have been an observation frequently in the mouth of Louis XIV. during the victorious Duke of Marlborough's campaigns.

He that England will win, Must with Ireland first begin.

Ireland furnishes England with a number of able men, both soldiers and sailors; and likewise beef, pork, butter, and other provisions, for victualling our fleets and foreign garrisons. If these supplies were cut off, by that country being in the hands of an enemy, it would be extremely detrimental to England.

In

E N G L A N D.

In England a bushel of March dust is worth a king's ransom.

England consisting chiefly of clay lands, a dry March makes them bear great crops of corn; wherefore, if in that month the weather is so dry as to make the roads dusty, the kingdom will be benefited to the amount of a king's ransom; which, according to the price paid for King Richard I. to the Emperor of Germany, was one hundred thousand pounds.

England a good land and a bad people.

This, according to Fuller, is another French proverb, no better founded than many of the preceding, and perhaps, like several of them, squinting a little at the Reformation.

*The High Dutch pilgrims, when they beg, do sing;
the Frenchmen whine and cry; the Spaniards curse, swear, and blaspheme; the Irish and English steal.*

This is a Spanish proverb, and may possibly be founded in truth. Pilgrims, gypsies, and other vagabonds, not being very scrupulous observers of the distinctions of property.

E N G L A N D.

In settling an island, the first building erected by a Spaniard will be a church; by a Frenchman, a fort; by a Dutchman, a warehouse; and by an Englishman, an alehouse.

This proverb was meant to shew the striking traits in the different national characters of the people here mentioned: those of the Spaniards are devotion and bigotry; of the French, military arrangements; of the Dutch, commerce; and the English, conviviality.

John Bull.

A name commonly used to signify an Englishman, from Dean Swift's ludicrous History of Europe, wherein the people of England are personified under that appellation; the sovereigns of Austria, France, Spain, by those of 'Squire South, Louis Baboon, and Strut; the Republick of Holland, by the name of Nick Frog.

Jack Roast-Beef.

A jocular name given by the French to Englishmen, who, as many of them suppose, cannot exist without roast beef, plumb-pudding, and punch; which liquor they term contradiction, from being compounded of lemon to make it sour, and sugar to make it sweet; water to make it weak, and spirits to make it strong.

The

E N G L A N D.

The Vicar of Bray will be Vicar of Bray still.

Fuller, in his quaint manner, thus explains this saying :
Bray, village, well known in this country, so called from the Bibroces, a kind of ancient Britons, inhabiting thereabouts. The vivacious Vicar hereof, living under King Henry VIII. King Edward VI. Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, was first a Papist, then a Protestant, then a Papist, then a Protestant again. He had seen some martyrs burnt (two miles off) at Windsor, and found this fire too hot for his tender conscience. This vicar being taxed by one for being a turncoat, and an unconstant changeling ; ‘ Not so,’ said he ; ‘ for I always keep my principle, which is this, to live and die the Vicar of Bray. Such are many, now-a-days, who, though they cannot turn the wind, will turn their mills, and set them so, that, wheresoever it bloweth, their grist shall certainly be grinded.” The Vicar of Bray has since been modernized in a well-written song, wherein his versatility is brought down to later times. The same story is often told as having happened to the Vicar of Bray, near Brayhead, in Ireland.

B A R K S H I R E.

He is a representative of Barkshire.

A VULGAR joke on any one afflicted with a cough, which is here termed barking.

B E D.

B E D F O R D S H I R E.

B E D F O R D S H I R E.

As plain as Dunstable road.

AT the time when this saying was first in use, the high roads of England were not what they are at present ; so that of Dunstable, being the great highway to the North, compared with the generality of roads, was conspicuously fine and broad.

Downright Dunstable.

Said to express a plain, simple, honest person, devoid of any turns or duplicity in their character. A comparison with the straightness and openness of that road.

As crooked as Crawley brook.

This is a nameless brook arising about Wooburn, running by Crawley, and falling immediately into the Ouse, a river much more remarkable than this brook for its frequent turnings and windings, for in its course it runs over eighty miles, in a linear distance of only eighteen.

The bailiff of Bedford is coming.

The Ouse, or Bedford river, is in Cambridgeshire called the bailiff of Bedford ; because, when swoln with rain in the winter-time, by overflowing, it carries off the cattle, &c. on the Isle of Ely and adjacent low grounds; so that this saying was a warning to drive off the cattle, &c. lest they should be distrained by the bailiff of Bedford; i. e. the river Ouse. By draining the fens, this bailiff's power has been superseded.

B E D F O R D S H I R E.

B U C K I N G H A M S H I R E.

Buckinghamshire bread and beef.

THIS county does not seem to have been particularly famous for either bread or beef. Fuller says only that the former was as fine, and the latter as fat, as in any other country. Probably this was only written to give a rhyme to the following line:

Here, if you beat a bush, 'tis odds you'll start a thief.

Buckinghamshire was, in old times, quite a forest, and a harbour for thieves, till Leofflane, Abbot of St. Alban's, caused the woods to be cut down. This proverb, from the expression, it's odds, seems hardly old enough to have any reference to that circumstance, as it is doubtful whether our ancestors were then sufficiently advanced in the science of gaming, to calculate odds.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.

An old man who weds a buxom young maiden, biddeth fair to become a freeman of Buckingham.

In all likelihood the fabricator of this proverb, by a free-man of Buckingham, meant a cuckold ; an event, it must be confessed, under those circumstances, much within the chapter of possibilities.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

Cambridgeshire oaks.

WILLOWS are so called, as a reflection on this county for its marshy soil, where only those trees will grow : this is however not true of the whole county.

Cambridge requires all to be equal.

Some interpret this to allude to the college commons, or messes, where all pay alike ; others suppose it expresses, that, among students of the same degree, family and fortune give no superiority.

Cambridgeshire camels.

The meaning of this proverb is very obscure. Fuller says, a camel is used proverbially to signify an awkward, ungain animal: scholars, long resident in college, are not famous for the gracefulness of their address; probably it was from this the gownsmen of Cambridge might be called camels, a term by no means dishonourable, as proving they have attended to Euclid more than to their dancing-masters. Some have supposed this term to have originated from the Fen-men, stalking through the marshes on their stilts, who then, by the apparent length of their legs, somewhat resemble the camel. Ray's supposition, that "this nick-name was groundlessly fastened on his countrymen, because the first three letters are the same in Cambridge and camel," seems to have very little reason to support it.

C A M B R I D G E S H I R E.

A boisten horse, and a Cambridge Master of Arts, are a couple of creatures that will give way to nobody.

This proverb, Fuller says, is found in a letter written to George Bruin, in his Theatre of Cities, and is produced against the university of Cambridge by Twine, an Oxford antiquary. It undoubtedly conveys a reflection on the politesse of the Masters of Arts of that learned body; but as this was written a long time ago, it is to be hoped that the more polished manners of the times have softened that ill-judged hauteur.

An Henry sophister.

Fuller, and from him Ray, says, "So are they called, who, after four years standing in the university, stay themselves selves from commencing Bachelors of Arts, to render them (in some colleges) more capable of preferment." Several reasons are assigned for their name.

That tradition is senseless, and inconsistent with his princely magnificence, of such who fancy, that King Henry the Eighth, coming to Cambridge, staid all the sophisters a year, who expected a year's grace should have been given unto them; more probable it is, because that king is commonly conceived of great strength and stature, that these sophistæ Henriciani were elder and bigger than the others. The truth is this: in the reign of King Henry the Eighth, after the destruction of monasteries, learning was at a loss, and the university (thanks be to God, more scared than hurt) stood at a gaze what would become of her. Hereupon many students staid themselves, two, three, some four years, as who would see how their degrees (before they took them) should be rewarded and maintained.

Twittle-twattle, drink up your posset-drink.

This proverb, says Ray, had its original in Cambridge, and is scarce known elsewhere. The meaning is evidently a reproof to any one who digresses from the subject on which he was speaking, and saying, in other words, Cease your nonsense, and go on with what you are about.

A Barnwell ague.

The venereal disease. Barnwell is a village near Cambridge, famous for the residence of the women of pleasure attending the university.

Cheshire chief of men.

THE lion was here the statuary. This proverb was in all likelihood made by a Cheshire-man, and relates to some privilege of marching or fighting in the van, in the ancient border conflicts with the Welsh.

Better wed over the mixon than over the moor.

It is better to take a wife born near one's own dunghill, i. e. house, than to marry a stranger from afar off. By marrying a neighbour, the characters and qualities of the parties are better known to each other, than they can be when a match takes place between a pair educated and living at a distance from each other.

In Cheshire there are Lees as plenty as fleas, and as many Davenports as dogs-tails.

The names of Lee and Davenport are extremely common in this county: the former is, however, variously spelt; as Lee, Lea, Leigh, Ley, &c.

stolen away by a young man, through that gate, whilst he was playing at ball with the other maidens, his Worship, out of revenge, caused it to be closed up. A bad parody of, When the steed is stolen, shut the stable-door.

To feed like a freeholder of Macclesfield, who has neither corn nor hay at Michaelmas.

To feed voraciously, like a half-starved mechanick. Macclesfield, or Maxfield, is a small market-town and borough in Cheshire, where there are many poor button-makers, who have neither hay nor corn all the year round.

As fair as Lady Done.

The Dones were a great family in Cheshire, living at Utkinton, by the forest-side. Cheshire nurses used to call their girls Lady Dones, and boys Earls of Derby.

Maxfield measure, heap and thrutch (thrust.)

The measures of the same denomination, in England, differ exceedingly, some being only filled level with the top of the measure, the protruding parts being struck off with a stick; this is called Strike-measure. At some places the measure is filled as full as it will hold, heaped up above the top; this is called Heap-measure. That of Maxfield was of this kind.

To scold like a wych-waller.

That is, like a boiler of falt. Wych-houfes are falt-houfes, and wallers are boilers, from walling, boiling. A number of very poor people are employed as falt-boilers at North-wyche, Nampt-wyche, &c.

Every man cannot be Vicar of Bowden.

Bowden is a good living near Chester.

As the Mayor of every other town must do, if he has but one pair, as is said to have been the case with this Worshipful Magistrate.

*The Mayor of Altringham and the Mayor of Over,
The one is a thatcher, the other a dauber.*

Altringham and Over are two petty corporations, whose poverty makes them ridiculous to their neighbours. A dauber is, I believe, one who makes the clay walls to cottages.

Stopford

C H E S H I R E.

Stopford law, no stake no draw.

It were much to be wished that all corporation laws were founded on as equitable principles. Certainly he who has no ticket, cannot be entitled to a prize in a lottery. This proverb is commonly used to signify, that only such as contribute to the liquor are entitled to drink of it.

*The constable of Oppenshaw sets beggars

Ray has not given the meaning of this proverb; nor can I guess at it.

Saddlerwick is said to be in Cheshire; but no such parish or place is mentioned in the Magna Britannia, or England's Gazetteer.

*She hath been at London to call a strea

This saying the common people of Cheshire use in scorn of those, who, having been at London, are ashamed to speak their own country dialect.

Some add to these a fourth inchoation, viz. Car, which signifies a rock, as Car-mine, Car-zeu, &c.

To give one a Cornish hug.

A Cornish hug is a lock in the art of wrestling, peculiar to the Cornish-men, who have always been famous for their skill in that manly exercise, which they still continue to practise.

*Hengston-down, well ywrought,
Is worth London-town dear ybought.*

Hengston-down was supposed not only to be extremely rich in tin, but also to have in its bowels Cornish diamonds, vulgarly estimated superior to those of India. In Fuller's time the tin began to fail here, having fallen, as he terms it, to a scant-saving scarcity. As to the diamonds, no one has yet judged it worth his while to dig for them.

When Dudman and Ramhead meet.

These are two headlands, well known to sailors; they are near twenty miles asunder; whence this proverb is meant to express an impossibility. Fuller observes that, nevertheless, these two points have since met together (though not in position) in possession of the same owner, Sir Pierce Edgcombe enjoying one in his own right, and the other in right of his wife.

The Devil will not come into Cornwall for fear of being put into a pie.

The people of Cornwall make pies of almost every thing eatable; as squab-pie, herby-pie, pilchard-pie, muggetty-pie, &c. &c.

He doth sail into Cornwall without a bark.

This is an Italian proverb, signifying that a man's wife has made him one of the knights of the bull's feather. The whole jest, if there be any, lying in the similitude of the words Cornwall and cornua, horns.

C O R N W A L L.

Fuller quotes a prophecy in the Cornish language, the sense of which is, that Truru consists of three streets, but a time will come when it shall be asked where Truru stood. On this he observes, that he trusts the men of that town are too wise to mind this prediction, any more than another of the same kind, presaging evil to the town, because ru, ru, which in English is woe, woe, is twice expressed in the Cornish name thereof. But, says he, let the men of Truru but practise the first syllable in the name of their town (meaning truth, i. e. integrity), and they may be safe and secure from all danger arising from the second.

He is driving his hogs over Swarston-bridge.

THIS is a saying used in Derbyshire, when a man snores in his sleep. Swarston-bridge (or bridges, for there are several of them, one after another) is very long, and not very wide, which causes the hogs to be crowded together ; in which situation they always make a loud grunting noise.

Said of persons whose birth-place and former residence are unknown. The Devil's A—se is a natural cavern, at Castleton, called one of the wonders of the Peak.

DERBYSHIRE.

Elden-hole wants filling.

A saying commonly used to great boasters, who vaunt they can do wonderful feats; pointing out to them one worthy of their undertaking; that is, the filling up Elden-hole, a fissure in the earth, vulgarly deemed bottomless. Cotton, in his description of the Peak, relates some fruitless attempts to measure its depth.

DEVONSHIRE.

To Denshire; i. e. to Devonshire land.

THIS is to pare the turf from off the surface, and to lay it in heaps and burn it: the ashes have been found greatly to enrich barren land, on account of the fixed salt which they contain. This, probably, was first practised in Devonshire; whence it derived its name. It is now practised on all barren spongy lands throughout England, previous to ploughing. Land so prepared will bear two or three good crops of corn, and must be then laid down again.

A Plymouth cloak.

A bludgeon, walking-stick, or staff. As a landman prepares himself for a journey by putting on his cloak, so a sailor equips himself by cutting a stick out of the first wood he comes to, the active service required of them on board never suffering them to encumber themselves with cloaks. As Plymouth is chiefly inhabited by sea-faring

He may remove Mort-stone.

A saying of any one who is master of his wife. Mort-stone, or More-stone, is a huge rock that blocks up the entrance into Mort's-bay, in this county, which there is a tradition cannot be removed, but by a man who is thoroughly master of his wife.

First hang and draw, Then hear the cause by Lidford law.

Lidford is a little and poor, but ancient corporation, in this county, with very large privileges, where a court of flannaries was formerly kept. This proverb is supposed to allude to some absurd determination made by the Mayor and Court of this corporation, who were formerly, in general, but mean and illiterate persons.

Westcot, in his History of Devonshire, has preserved some droll verses on this town; which, as I do not remember to have seen in print, are here transcribed.

I oft have heard of Lydford law,
How in the morning they hange and draw,
And sit in judgement after;
At first I wondred at yt much,
But since I fynd the reasons such
As yt deserves no laughter.

If Pool was a fish-pool, and the men of Pool fish, There'd be a pool for the Devil, and fish for his dish.

This satyrical distich was written a long time ago. Pool is, at present, a respectable place, and has in it several rich merchants trading to Newfoundland.

When do you fetch the five pounds?

It is said, that a rich merchant of Pool left by his will the sum of five pounds, to be given every year, to set up any poor man who had served his apprenticeship in that town, on condition that he should produce a certificate of his honesty, properly authenticated. This bequest has not, it is pretended, been yet claimed; and it is a common water-joke to ask the crew of a Pool ship whether any one has yet received that five pounds.

Shoot zafly, doey now.

Another gird at the Poolites. A privateer of that town having, it is said, loaded their guns, on their return to port wished to draw out the shot, but did not know how, nor could they think of any other method than that of firing them off, and receiving the shot in a kettle: the person

person employed to hold the kettle, being somewhat apprehensive of danger, prayed his companion, who was to discharge the gun, to shoot zafily. This is told of divers other ports, and, in all likelihood, with equal truth.

The Devil pift piddles about Dorchester.

This saying arifes from the number of small streams running through different villages hereabouts, which, from that circumstance, have their names terminating in puddle, pronounced piddle; as Piddle-town, Toll-piddle, Aff-piddle, &c. &c. These waters are very improperly called puddles, being most of them clear and running.

Dorsetshire dorfers.

Dorfers are peds, or paniers, fixed on the backs of horses, in which higlers carry fish, poultry, and other provisions and wares. Probably these were either invented, or first generally used, in Dorsetshire; as the fish-jobbers, according to Fuller, used to carry their fish from Lyme to London.

E S S E X.

Essex stiles, Kentish miles, Norfolk wiles, many men beguiles.

TWO very different explanations are given of that part of this ungrammatical proverb which relates to Essex. The first says, the inclosures in Essex are very small, and
the

the stiles, consequently, very frequent, and being also very high and bad, are extremely troublesome to strangers. The other is, that by stiles are meant narrow bridges, such as are laid between marsh and marsh in the hundreds of this county, only jocularly called stiles, as the loose stone-walls in Derbyshire are ludicrously called hedges.

Kentish miles were not, in reality, longer than those of other counties; but, before the general introduction of turnpikes, most of the Kentish roads, especially those in that part called the Weald, were almost impassable, so that a carriage could not travel more than a couple of miles in an hour, whereby the miles seemed of an extraordinary length, and deceived or beguiled many travellers, who calculated their journies according to the number of miles they had to go, without considering the state of the roads.

Norfolk wiles. Norfolk is said to have been remarkable for litigation, and the quirks and quibbles of its attornies: this was so great a grievance in the reign of Henry VI. that, A. D. 1455, a petition was presented from the commons, shewing that the number of attornies for the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk had lately increased from six or eight to eighty, whereby the peace of those counties had been greatly interrupted by suits; they therefore petitioned it might be ordained, that there should be no more than six common attornies for the county of Norfolk, six for Suffolk, and two for the city of Norwich; these to be elected by the chief justices for the time being; any other person acting as an attorney, to be fined twenty pounds, half to the King and half to the plaintiff. The King granted the petition, provided it was thought reasonable by the judges. Rot. Parlm. in anno Essex calves.

Essex has long been famous for its calves, and at present chiefly supplies London with veal. Fuller observes, that this trade must have been formerly very profitable, if one may judge by the fine sepulchral monuments of marble, inlaid with brass, erected for butchers, in Cogshall, Chelmsford, and other churches, where in their epitaphs they are inscribed carnifices. These tombs were, in Weaver's opinion, befitting more eminent men; and, according to Fuller, serve to shew, that the butchers of this county have been richer (or at least prouder) than those in other places.

Essex lions.

He was born at Little Wittham.

A punning insinuation that the person spoken of wants understanding. Ray places this proverb in Lincolnshire.

The weavers beef of Colchester.

That is, sprats, caught thereabouts, and brought thither in incredible abundance; whereon the poor weavers (numerous in that town) are frequently fed.

Jeering Cogshall.

This (says Ray) is no proverb, but an ignominious epithet, fastened on this place by their neighbours, which, as I hope they do not glory in, so I believe they are not guilty of. Other towns in this county have had the like abusive epithet. I remember a rhyme, which was in common use formerly, of some towns not far distant the one from the other :

Braintree for the pure, and Bocking for the poor ;
Cogshall for the jeering town, and Kelvedon for the whore.

*Go to Rumford to have your backside

Dover-court, all speakers and no hearers.

Dover-court is a village about three miles west of Harwich, to which its church is the mother-church. Here a court is annually held, in which, as it chiefly consisted of seamen, the irregularity described in this proverb is likely to prevail.

They may claim the bacon at Dunmow.

This proverb alludes to a custom instituted in the manor of Little Dunmow, in this county, by the Lord Fitzwalter,

who lived in the reign of Henry III. which was, that any wedded couple, who, after being married a year and a day, would come to the priory, and, kneeling on two sharp-pointed stones, before the prior and convent, swear that during that time they had neither repented of their bargain, nor had any diffention, should have a gammon or fitch of bacon. The records here mention several persons who have claimed and received it. The custom of late has been left off. The form of the oath was as follows :

You shall swear by the custome of our confession,
That you never made any nuptiall transgression,
Since you were married man and wife,
By household brawls or contentious strife ;
Or otherwise in bed or bord,
Offended each other in deed or word ;
Or since the parish clerk said amen,
Wished yourselves unmarried agen ;
Or in a twelvemonth and a day,
Repented not in thought any way ;
But continued true and in desire,
As when you join'd hands in holy quire.
If to these conditions, without all fear,
Of your own accord you will freely swear,
A gammon of bacon you shall receive,
And bear it hence with love and good leave ;
For this is our custome, at Dunmow well known,
Though the sport be ours, the bacon's your own.

This is applied to such things as are slow, but sure. Said of any peevish or snappish person, or one having a cross, fierce, or ill-natured countenance. Tewksbury is a market-town in this county, famous for its mustard, which is extremely hot, biting, and poignant, and therefore, by this proverb, supposed to communicate those qualities to persons fed with it.

Said of one remarkably stupid. See Shakesp. Hen. IV.

*The Tracies have always the wind in

A superstitious legend. Sir William Tracy was one of the four knights who killed that turbulent prelate Thomas Becket; for the punishment of which offence it miraculously happened, that whenever any of the Tracy family travelled, either by land or by water, the wind always blew in their faces. This, Fuller justly observes, was, in hot weather, a blessing instead of a curse, exempting the females of that family from the expence and trouble of buying and using a fan.

*Canterbury is the higher rack, but Winchester

W. Edington, Bishop of Winchester, was the author of this saying, giving it as a reason for his refusal to be translated to the see of Canterbury, though nominated thereunto. Indeed, though Canterbury be graced with an higher honour, the net revenues of Winchester are greater, there being less state to be supported. The proverb is applied to such as prefer a wealthy privacy before a less profitable dignity. Queen Mary obliged the manger in some sort to maintain the rack, by commanding John White, Bishop of Winchester, to pay a thousand pounds to Cardinal Pole, Archbishop of Canterbury, for the better support of his estate.

This speech, as Fuller remarks, has more of mirth than truth in it. Perhaps, if, instead of none, it were said they had few of the unprofitable and troublesome inmates there mentioned, it might be nearer the fact.

The remains of the monasteries of the black monks at Carisbrook, and white ones at Quarrer, in this island, confute one part of this saying. Indeed, that there should be a fertile, healthy, and pleasant spot, without monks, a rich place without lawyers, and a country abounding with lambs, poultry, and game, without foxes, is evidently an improbability.

HERTFORDSHIRE.

from the vulgar error of their sucking cows, have, time out of mind, been proscribed, and three-pence or a groat paid for every one of them brought dead or alive to the churchwardens, by whose order they are commonly gibbeted on one of the yew-trees in the church-yard. The hedge-hog is emblematically used to represent a bad neighbour, an unsociable and ill-conditioned person; its points, when set up, forbidding a near approach. Whether this appellation was formerly applied to the people of this county in that sense does not appear.

Hertfordshire clubs and clouted shoon.

This is a gibe at the rusticity of the honest Hertfordshire yeomen and farmers. Club is an old term for a booby. This saying was probably fabricated by some inhabitant of London; but it should be considered, that, although Hertfordshire is situated in the neighbourhood of the metropolis, yet, great part of it being no general thoroughfare, nor much-frequented high-road, the inhabitants are likely to be as countrified as persons living at a greater distance from town. Clouted shoon is part of the dress of a husbandman and farmer; and, as Fuller observes, being worn by the tenants, enables their landlords to wear Spanish-leather boots and pumps.

Ware and Wade's mill are worth all London.

The solution of this saying turns on the equivocal meaning of the word ware, by which is here meant ware, goods, or merchandize, and not the town of Ware, anciently anciently spelt Wear, from the stoppages which there obstructed the river. Wade's-mill is a village two miles north of Wear or Ware.

HERTFORDSHIRE.

Hertfordshire kindness.

That is, any one drinking back to his right-hand man; i. e. the person who immediately before drank to him. Perhaps a method practised by some persons of this county. Fuller says this adage is meant to express a return for a favour or benefit conferred. It rather seems to mean returning a favour at the expence of others, as, by this inversion in the circulation of the glass, some of the company are deprived of their turn.

HEREFORDSHIRE.

Blessed is the eye

That is between Severn and Wye.

THIS proverb Fuller supposes to refer not only to the beautiful and fertile country so situated, but also to allude to the safety from hostile invasions arising from the protection of those two rivers.

Lemster bread and Weably ale.

Both, undoubtedly, very good of their kind, though not superior to the bread and ale of divers other counties.

Probably

HEREFORDSHIRE.

Probably this saying was calculated for the meridian of the county of Hereford only, where these towns might have a striking superiority in the articles above mentioned. Fuller, in explaining this proverb, tells us, from Camden, that the wheat growing about Heston, in Middlesex, yielded so fine a flour, that for a long time the manchets for the Kings of England were made thereof.

Every one cannot dwell at Rotheras.

Rotheras was a fine feat in this county, belonging to the Lord Bodmans.

Sutton-Wall and Kenchester are able to buy all London, were it to sell.

Two places in this county, probably supposed to contain mines, or some hidden treasure.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE.

An Huntingdon sturgeon.

This is the way to Beggar's-bush.

IT is spoken of such who use dissolute and improvident courses, which tend to poverty; Beggar's-bush being a well-known tree, on the left-hand of the London-road from Huntingdon to Caxton. This punning adage is said to

to be of royal origin, made and applied by King James I. to Sir Francis Bacon, he having ever generously rewarded a poor man for a trifling present.

Ramsley the rich.

This was the Cræsus of all our English abbies; for, having but sixty monks to maintain out of seven thousand pounds a year, the share of each monk was an hundred pounds, with a surplus of a thousand pounds for the abbot; prodigious sums at that time; yet, at the dissolution of monasteries, the annual revenues of this house were estimated at but one thousand nine hundred and eighty-three pounds; which shews how much the estates of religious houses were under-rated in those valuations.

Ramsley was an abbey of Benedictine monks, built by Ailwine, Alderman of all England, Duke or Earl of the East Angles, A. D. 969, and dedicated to the honour of St. Mary and St. Benedict. After the dissolution, the scite, with several of the manors, were granted, 31st of Henry VIII. to Richard Williams, alias Cromwell.

K E N T.

Neither in Kent nor Christendom.

THIS seems, says Fuller, a very insolent expression, and as unequal a division. Surely the first author thereof had small skill in even distribution, to measure an inch against an ell, yea, to weigh a grain against a pound.
But

K E N T.

But know, reader, that this home-proverb is English Christendom, whereof Kent was first converted to the faith. So then Kent and Christendom (parallel to Rome and Italy) is as much as the first cut and all the loaf besides. I know there passes a report, that Henry IV. King of France, mustering his soldiers at the siege of a city, found more Kentish-men therein, than foreigners of all Christendom beside; which (being but seventy years since) is, by some, made the original of this proverb, which was more ancient in use, and therefore I adhere to the former interpretation. With all due deference to the above authority, this proverb rather seems intended as an ironical reproof to the good people of Kent for over-rating the importance of their county; the Kentish-men formerly claiming the right of marching in the van of the English army.

A man of Kent.

All the inhabitants of Kent, east of the river Medway, are called Men of Kent, from the story of their having retained their ancient privileges, particularly those of gavelkind, by meeting William the Conqueror at Swanscomb-bottom; each man, besides his arms, carrying a green bough in his hand; by this contrivance concealing their numbers under the appearance of a moving wood. The rest of the inhabitants of the county are stiled Kentish-men.

A Knight

K E N T

*A Knight of Cales, a Gentleman of Wales, and a Laird of the North countree,
A Yeoman of Kent, with his yearly rent, will buy them out all three.*

Many very poor Gentlemen were knighted by Robert, Earl of Essex, in his expedition to Cales, A. D. 1596, when he conferred that honour on sixty persons; for this he was blamed by Queen Elizabeth, as making the honour of knighthood too cheap.

As every Welshman is undoubtedly a Gentleman, there must inevitably be among them a number of very poor ones, as well as among the Northern Lairds, who have not, till lately, suffered any of their family to engage in commerce or trade.

A Yeoman was an independent man, somewhat less than a Gentleman (a term formerly not so liberally dealt out as at present). A yeoman occupied his own land, killed his own mutton, and wore the fleeces of his own sheep, spun in his house. The yeomanry of Kent were famous for their riches. This class of people is now entirely extinct, the title of Gentleman being almost as universally claimed in England as in Wales.

*The father to the bough,
The son to the plough.*

This alludes to one of the privileges of gavel-kind, enjoyed by part of this county, whereby, in many felo-
E
nies,

K E N T.

nies, only the goods and chattels, but not the lands, are forfeited to the crown, on the execution of a criminal.

Gavel-kind was an ancient Saxon custom, enacting an equal division of the lands of the parent among his children, as its name implies; gavel-kind being a corruption of the German, gieb alle kind, give to all the children. Many Kentish estates were disgavelled by an act of parliament of the 31st of King Henry VIII. on the petition of the owners.

Kent is divided into three parts; the first has health without wealth, the second wealth without health, and the third both health and wealth.

The first is East Kent, the part adjoining to the sea, which is extremely pleasant and healthy, but has much poor land; the second is the Weald and Romney-marsh, famous for its fine pastures and rich graziers, but extremely subject to agues; the third is that part of Kent in the neighbourhood of London, where the situation is healthy, the soil good, and the inhabitants rich.

Long, lazy, lousy Lewisham.

Lewisham is certainly a very long town or village, and, it is said, was once a very poor one; often the consequence of idleness; and that poor and idle persons should be infested with the vermin mentioned in the proverb, is also very natural: though, on the whole, it is likely that the alliteration of this proverb, rather than the truth of it, has preserved it to the present time.

A jack

K E N T.

A jack of Dover.

A jack of Dover is mentioned by Chaucer, in his Proeme to the Cook :

And many a jack of Dover he had fold,
Which had been two times hot and two times cold.

If by a jack is meant the fish now so called, that is, a small pike, the produce of the little river running through that place is much changed, there being very few, if any, pike in it. Indeed this proverb, if it may be called one, seems to have very little meaning in it.

A Dover shark, and a Deal savage.

The corpse of a drowned man having been driven on shore, near Dover, with a gold ring on his finger, one of the inhabitants of that place found him, and, being unable to take off the ring, from the swelling of his finger, bit it off; whence the Dover-men have obtained the nick-name of sharks. The appellation of Deal savage probably originated from the brutality and exaction of the boatmen, who take every advantage of the necessities of travellers and passengers. One thing, however, should be mentioned in their favour; which is, that, in cases of shipwreck, they are ever ready to venture their own lives to save those of the shipwrecked crews.

Kentish long-tails.

This appellation is said to have been given to the Kentishmen from the following circumstance:—The inhabitants of a Kentish village not only beat and abused St. Augustine and his companions, whilst preaching, but also opprobriously tied fish-tails to their backsides; on which the saint caused tails to grow on the rumps of those men and all their descendants. Fuller says, this event is pretended to have happened near Cerne in Dorsetshire, and therefore does not relate to this county. A similar insult and punishment is said to have been transacted at Chatham or Rochester; only, instead of St. Augustine, the injured party was St. Thomas Becket.

Another solution given to this matter is, that, during one of the crusades, the English soldiers used to wear bags, or wallets for carrying their necessities, which bags or wallets hung down behind them like tails; whence, in some dispute between William Longspee, Earl of Salisbury, and Robert, brother of St. Louis, King of France, the latter called the English long-tails. How the name happened to stick only on the Kentish-men remains to be explained.

*Deal, Dover, and Harwich,
The Devil gave with his daughter in marriage;
And, by a codicil to his will,
He added Helvoet and the Brill.*

A satirical squib thrown at the inn-keepers of those places, in return for the many impositions practised on travellers, as well natives as strangers. Equally applicable to most other sea-ports.

Tenterden

Tenterden steeple's the cause of Godwin's-sands.

“ This proverb (says Ray) is used when an absurd and ridiculous reason is given of any thing in question; an account of the original whereof I find in one of Bishop Latimer's sermons, in these words:—Mr. Moore was once sent with commission into Kent, to try out, if it might be, what was the cause of Godwin's-sands, and the shelf which stopped up Sandwich-haven. Thither cometh Mr. Moore, and calleth all the country before him, such as were thought to be men of experience, and men that could of likelihood best satisfy him, of the matter concerning the stopping of Sandwich-haven. Among the rest came in before him an old man with a white head, and one that was thought to be little less than an hundred years old. When Mr. Moore saw this aged man, he thought it expedient to hear him say his mind in this matter (for, being so old a man, it was likely that he knew most in that presence or company); so Mr. Moore called this old-aged man unto him, and said, Father (said he), tell me, if you can, what is the cause of the great arising of the sands and shelves here about this haven, which stop it up, so that no ships can arrive here; you are the oldest man I can espy in all the company; so that, if any man can tell any cause of it, you, of all likelihood, can say most to it, or, at leastwise, more than any man here assembled. Yea, forsooth, good Mr. Moore, quoth this old man, for I am well nigh an hundred years old, and no man here in company any thing near my age. Well then, quoth Mr. Moore, how say you to this matter? But think you to be the cause of these shelves and sands that stop up Sandwich-haven? Forsooth, Sir, quoth he, I am an old man ; I think that Tenterden-steeples is the cause of Godwin's-sands : for I am an old man, Sir, quoth he ; I may remember the building of Tenterden-steeples ; I may remember when there was no steeples at all there ; and before that Tenterden-steeples was in building, there was no manner of talking of any flats or sands that stopt up the haven ; and therefore I think that Tenterden-steeples is the cause of the decay and destroying of Sandwich-haven." Thus far the Bishop.

But Fuller observes, that one story is good till another is told ; and, though this be all whereupon this proverb is generally grounded, I met since, says he, with a supplement thereunto : it is this. Time out of mind money was constantly collected out of this county, to fence the east banks thereof against the irruption of the seas ; and such sums were deposited in the hands of the Bishop of Rochester : but, because the sea had been very quiet for many years without any encroaching, the Bishop commuted that money to the building of a steeples, and endowing a church, at Tenterden. By this diversion of the collection for the maintenance of the banks, the sea afterwards brake in upon Godwin's-sands. And now the old man had told a rational tale, had he found but the due favour to finish it ; and thus, sometimes, that is causelessly accounted ignorance of the speaker, which is nothing but impatience in the auditors, unwilling to attend to the end of the discourse.

Starve 'em, Rob 'em, and Cheat 'em.

Stroud, Rochester, and Chatham. A saying in the mouths of the soldiers and sailors, in allusion to the impositions practised on them.

LANCASHIRE.

LANCASHIRE.

Lancashire fair women.

THE beauty of the women of this county has long been proverbial, witness the well-known appellation of Lancashire witches; which, at the same time as it records the beauty of the Lancashire females, carries with it a kind of reflection on the males, for their superstitious cruelty, in executing a number of poor innocent people, under the denomination of witches; this saying implying, that the charms of female beauty are the only charms by which a rational man can be affected.

That the women of one county may remarkably differ from those of another, seems a matter not to be doubted; air, food, and situation, producing striking variations in the size, shape, and colour, of animals; therefore why not in the human species.

It is written upon a wall at Rome, Ribchester was as rich as any town in Christendom.

Some monumental wall, whereon the names of the principal places were inscribed then subject to the Roman empire; and probably that Ribchester was anciently some eminent colony (as by pieces of coins and columns there daily digged out doth appear): however, at this day, it is not so much as a market-town; but whether decayed by age, age, or destroyed by accident, is uncertain. It is called Ribchester, because situated on the river Ribble. This is Mr. Ray's solution; but probably the meaning does not lie so deep. It rather seems to have been meant as a reproof to any mean person boasting of their ancestors, and to be interpreted thus: Suppose this poor village of Ribchester to have been once as rich as any town in Christendom, what is it the better for it now? Or else, on some one boasting of former importance he cannot prove, to quote the circumstance of the inscription on the Roman wall, by way of a ridiculous parallel.

As old as Pendle-hill.

This is generally understood to mean coeval with the creation, or, at least, with the flood; although, if it be, as some have supposed, the effect of a volcano, its first existence may have a later date.

*If Bever have a cap,
You churles of the vale look to that.*

That is, when the clouds hang over the tower of Bever-castle, it is a prognostick of much rain, which is extremely unfavourable to that fruitful vale lying in the three counties of Leicester, Lincoln, and Nottingham.

Bread for Borough-men.

At Great Glen there are more great dogs than honest men.

Carleton warlers.

So called from a rattling in their throats, of which Burton thus speaks. I cannot here omit one observation, which, by some, hath been made, of the naturalists of this town, that all those who are born here, have a harsh and rattling kind of speech, uttering their words with much difficulty and wharling in the throat, and cannot well pronounce the letter R. It is however said, the present generation have got over this impediment.

Put up your pipes, and go to Lockington-wake.

Lockington stands in the utmost north angle of the shire, upon the confines of Derby and Nottingham shires, near the confluence of the Trent and Sore. Probably this was a saying to a troublesome fellow, desiring him to take himself off to a great distance.

The last man that he killed keeps hogs in Hinckley-field.

Spoken of a coward that never durst fight.

He has gone over Afsfordy-bridge backwards.

Spoken of one that is past learning. Probably the point of this lies in the equivocal word Afs.

Like the Mayor of Hartlepool, you cannot do that.

Ray places this among the Leicestershire proverbs, but it rather seems to belong to Durham, Hartlepool being within that bishoprick. The sense of it is, you cannot work impossibilities; an allusion to the following story. A Mayor of a poor corporation, desirous to shew his old companions that he was not too much elated by his high office, told them, that, though he was Mayor of that corporation, he was still but a man, there being many things he could not do.

Bedworth

LEICESTERSHIRE.

Bedworth beggars.

Probably some poor hamlet. It is not mentioned by Burton; or any of the topographical writers.

He leaps like the Bell-giant, or devil of Mountforrel.

About Mountforrel, or Mountftrill, says Peck, the country people have a story of a giant or devil, named Bell, who once, in a merry vein, took three prodigious leaps; which they thus describe. At a place, thence ever after called Mountforrel, he mounted his forrel horse, and leaped a mile, to a place, from it since named Oneleap, now corrupted to Wanlip; thence, he leaped another mile, to a village called Burst-all, from the bursting of both himself, his girts, and his horse; the third leap was also a mile; but the violence of the exertion and shock killed him, and he was there buried, and the place has ever since been denominated Bell's-grave, or Bell-grave. This story seems calculated to ridicule those tellers of miraculous stories, called shooters in the long bow.

There are more whores in Hofs, than honest women in Long-Claxton.

Hofs and Long-Claxton are neighbouring villages, within a mile of each other: Howes, or Hofs, is but a small place; Long Claxton, Clayston, or Clawston, is a very large one, near a mile long. Travellers, when they come in sight of these two places, are generally entertained with with this coarse proverb; and, at first, considering the different sizes of the two places, are apt to be surprized at the oddness of the assertion: but the entendre lies in the word Hose, which here is meant to signify stockings; so that the assertion is, That there are more whores who wear stockings, than there are honest women dwelling in Long-Clawston.

Hogs-Norton, where Piggs play on the organs.

The true name of the town, according to Peck, is Hocks-Norton, but vulgarly pronounced Hogs-Norton. The organist to this parish-church was named Piggs.

The same again, quoth Mark of Bell-grave.

This story is said to be an allusion to an ancient militia-officer, in Queen Elizabeth's time, who, exercising his company before the lord-lieutenant, was so abashed, that, after giving the first word of command, he could recollect no more, but repeatedly ordered them to do the same again.

What have I to do with Bradshaw's windmill?

L I N C O L N S H I R E.

As loud as Tom of Lincoln.

This Tom of Lincoln is an extraordinary great bell, hanging in one of the towers of Lincoln minster: how it got that name I know not, unless it were imposed on it when baptized by the Papists. Howbeit, the present Tom was cast in King James's time, anno 1610. Tom is by some said to be a common name for a great bell, from the supposed resemblance the sound has to that word.

He looks at it (or him) as the devil looks over Lincoln.

Some refer this to Lincoln minster; over which, when first finished, the devil is supposed to have looked with a fierce and terrific countenance, as incensed and alarmed at this costly instance of devotion. Ray thinks it more probable that it took its rise from a small image of the devil placed on the top of Lincoln-college, Oxford, over which he looks, seemingly with much fury.

All the carts that come to Crowland are shod with silver.

When this saying was first used, it was true; for Crowland was situate in such moorish and rotten ground, in the fens, that scarce a horse, much less a cart, could come to it. It has since been drained; so that, in summer-time, Crowland may be visited by a common cart.

This is an appellation given to persons born in the fens, who, it is jocularly said, have yellow bellies, like their eels.

As mad as the baiting bull of Stamford.

William, Earl Warren, Lord of this town, in the time of King John, standing upon the walls of the castle at Stamford, saw two bulls in the meadow, fighting for a cow, till all the butchers dogs, great and small, pursued one of them, maddened by the noise and multitude, quite through the town. This sight so pleased the Earl, that he gave all those meadows, called the Castle-meadows, where first this bull duel began, for a common, to the butchers of the town (after the first grass was eaten), on condition they annually find a mad bull to be baited, the day six weeks before Christmas-day.

wanting; also, figuratively, to any discourse wherein the speaker uses a multiplicity of words foreign to the main point.

They hold together as the men of Marsham, when they lost their common.

This is most probably spoken ironically, and means, that, by being divided into different factions, these men ruined their cause, and lost their common. Ray says, others use it as an expression of ill success, when men strive and plot together to no purpose.

L O N D O N.

A London jury, hang half and save half.

SOME affirm this of an Essex, others of a Middlesex jury. Perhaps it is equally true of all; that is, untrue of all three. It supposes that these jurors, either unable or unwilling to be at the pains of attending to the evidence, endeavour to temper justice with mercy, by acquitting one half of the prisoners, and condemning the other. An hour's attendance at the Old-Bailey would shew the falsity of this adage.

London-bridge was made for wise men to go over, and fools to go under.

* This proverb, since the opening and paving of the bridge, has more truth in it than it formerly had; for, before before that improvement, a man run as great, if not a greater risk of being squeezed to death by a cart, in going over it, than of being drowned by going under it. At present the safety is in favour of the land passage.

Ane ill word meets another and if it were at the bridge of London.

This (says Fuller) is a Scottish proverb; and indeed a Scottish text needs a Scottish comment thereon. However, I thus guess at the meaning thereof. London-bridge is notoriously known for a narrow pass and numerous passengers; so that people meeting thereon, a quarrel will quickly be engendered, if one of them hath not the wit or patience to step into a shop, if on foot; if on horseback, to stay in void places. Thus words quickly inflame a difference, except one of the parties have the discretion of silence, yielding, or departure.

He got it by way of Cheapside.

A punning mode of expressing that a person has obtained any thing for less than its price or value.

Billingsgate language.

Billingsgate is the grand fish-market, to which the fishermen bring their fish, and the fishmongers, both stationary and ambulant, repair to purchase them. Among the latter there are many of the fair sex, not famous for the politeness of their address, delicacy of language, or patience and long suffering.

L O N D O N.

He that is at a low ebb at Newgate, may soon be afloat at Tyburn.

Newgate, Tyburn, and the gallows, have been long the subject of much low wit. Were public executions conducted more solemnly, and the ignominy of that kind of death strongly inculcated into the common people, perhaps those dreadful exhibitions might be less frequent.

Dressed like a Bartholomew baby.

Spoken of one over-finely dressed, like a child's doll at Bartholomew fair; these dolls, or babies, being habited in silks of various colours, decorated with tinsel, &c.

*When Tottenham-wood is all on fire,
Then Tottenham-street is nought but mire.*

Fuller quotes this proverb from Mr. William Bedwell, one of the translators of the Bible, and gives the following as his solution. When Tottenham-wood, of many hundred acres, on the top of an high hill, in the west end of the parish, hath a foggy mist hanging and hovering over it, in the manner of smoke, then, generally, foul weather followeth; so that it serveth the inhabitants instead of a prognostication.

There is another explanation of this proverb. Tottenham-wood is said to have served that part of London nearest to it with wood for fuel; and when that wood was all on fire, i. e. in winter, Tottenham-street was extremely foul and miry.

Tottenham

L O N D O N.

Tottenham is turned French.

About the beginning of the reign of Henry VIII. a vast number of French mechanics came over to England, filling not only the outskirts of the town, but also the neighbouring villages, to the great prejudice of the English artificers; which caused the insurrection in London, May-day, A. D. 1517. This proverb is used in ridicule of persons affecting foreign fashions and manners, in preference to those of their own country.

You shall as easily remove Tottenham-wood.

Spoken as a thing impossible to be effected.

London lick-penny.

The truth of this appellation, though a very old one, will, I trust, be supported by the testimony of every person caused by business or pleasure to visit it; but it will appear with the greatest propriety to country gentlemen, who bring up their wives and daughters to see the town.

St. Giles's breed; fat, ragged, and saucy.

The people of that parish, particularly those resident in Newtoner and Dyot streets, still retain their rags and impudence, but do not seem remarkable for their embonpoint. Perhaps the proverb only meant to indicate that they did not

not wear down their flesh by hard labour; in which case, lazy, ragged, and saucy, would have been a better description of them.

He will ride backwards up Holborn-hill.

He will come to be hanged. Criminals condemned for offences committed in London and Middlesex, were, till about the year 1784, executed at Tyburn, the way to which, from Newgate, was up Holborn-hill. They were generally conveyed in carts (except such as had interest to obtain leave to ride thither in a coach). They, I mean those in carts, were always placed with their backs towards the horses, it is said out of humanity, that they might not be shocked with a view of the gallows till they arrived under it; though some think the mode of riding was to increase the ignominy.

He will faint at the smell of a wall-flower.

Intimating that the person so spoken of had been confined in the gaol of Newgate, formerly styled the wall-flower, from the wall-flowers growing up against it.

*He may whet his knife on the threshold of

Said of persons who are not in debt; as they may go into a prison without danger of being detained. This proverb, however, is sometimes used in a different sense: on seeing a person newly come to a great fortune, and spending

spending it extravagantly, it naturally occurs, that by such proceedings he may whet his knife on the threshold of the Fleet; which may be done as well on one side as the other of the iron grates. The Fleet takes its name from a small brook running by it.

A cockney.

A very ancient nick-name for a citizen of London. Ray says, an interpretation of it is, a young person coaxed or cocquered, made a wanton, or nestle-cock, delicately bred and brought up, so as, when arrived at man's estate, to be unable to bear the least hardship. Another, a person ignorant of the terms of country œconomy, such as a young citizen, who, having been ridiculed for calling the neighing of a horse laughing, and told that was called neighing, next morning, on hearing the cock crow, to shew instruction was not thrown away upon him, exclaimed to his former instructor, How that cock neighs! whence the citizens of London have ever since been called cock-neighs, or cockneys. Whatever may be the origin of this term, we at least learn from the following verses, attributed to Hugh Bagot, Earl of Norfolk, that it was in use in the time of King Henry II..

Was I in my castle at Bungay,
Fast by the river Waveney,
I would not care for the King of Cockney;

i. e. the King of London.

The King of the Cocknies occurs among the regulations for the sports and shews formerly held in the Middle-Temple, on Childermas-day, where he had his officers, a mar-

L O N D O N.

a marshal, constable, butler, &c.—See Dugdale's Origines Juridicales, p. 247.

He was born within the sound of Bow-bell.

This, says Fuller, is the periphrasis of a Londoner at large, born within the suburbs thereof; the sound of this bell exceeding the extent of the lord-mayor's mace. It is called Bow-bell, because hanging in the steeple of Bow-church; and Bow-church, because built on bows; or arches: but I have been told, says Ray, that it was so called from the cross stone arches or bows on the top of the steeple.

According to Stowe, one John Dun, a mercer, gave, in 1472, two tenements, to maintain the ringing of this bell every night, at nine o'clock, as a signal for the city apprentices and servants to leave off work. William Copeland, the King's merchant, about the year 1520, gave a bigger bell, for the same purpose, and had the hanfel of it himself, it being first rang as a knell at his burial.

*Kirbie's castle, and Megse's glory,
Spinola's pleasure, and Fisber's folly.*

These were four houses about the city, built by citizens, who thereby ruined themselves. Fuller says, the first of these is so uncastellated, and the glory of the second so obscured, that very few know (and it were needless to tell them) where these houses stood.

As

L O N D O N.

As for Spinola (adds he), a Genoan, made a free denizen, the master and fellows of a college in Cambridge know too well what he was, by their expensive suit, known to posterity by Magdalen-college case. If his own country (I mean the Italian) curse did overtake him, and if the plague of building did light upon him, few, I believe, did pity him.

As for the last, it was built by Jasper Fish, free of the goldsmiths', one of the six clerks in chancery, and a justice of peace, who, being a man of no great wealth (as indebted to many), built here a beautiful house, with gardens of pleasure and bowling-allies about it, called Devonshire house at this day.

He will follow him like St. Anthony's pig.

St. Anthony was originally a swine-herd, and in all pictures and sculptures is represented as being followed by a pig, frequently having a bell about its neck. Probably this pig might have been one of his former élevés, before he took on himself the trade of a saint. The attachment of this pig, or hog, at length, grew proverbial.

Fuller gives another explanation ; which take in his own words : “ St. Anthonie is notoriously known for the patron of hogs, having a pig for his page in all pictures, though for what reason unknown ; except because, being a hermit, and having a cell or hole digged in the earth, and having his general repast on roots, he and hogs did in some sort enter commons, both in their diet and lodgings.”

There was a fair hospital built to the honour of St. Anthony, in Bennet's Fink, in this city, the protectors and

and proctors whereof claimed a privilege to themselves to garble the live pigs in the markets of the city, and such as they found starved, or otherwise unwholesome for man's sustenance, they would slit in the ear, tie a bell about their necks, and let them loose about the city.

None durst hurt or take them up (having the livery of St. Anthony upon them), but many would give them bread, and feed them in their passage, whom they used to follow, whining after them. But, if such pigs proved fat, and well-liking, as often they did, the officers of St. Anthony's hospital would seize on them for their own use. This proverb is applicable to such who have servile, saleable souls, who, for a small reward, will lacquey many miles, pressing their patrons with their unwelcome importunity.

Tower of London.*

This tower anciently was, and in part still is, the magazine of England's wealth. There the silver, the mint of money, and there the brass and iron to defend it, the armory, and storehouse of ordnance; yet fools so doat on their darling fancies, that they prize them above all this treasure. But, alas! we do ourselves what we deride in others. Every one is addicted to some vanity or another, which he will not part with on any conditions, so weak and wilful we are by nature. He that will not freely and sadly confess he is much a fool, is all a fool.—Thus saith Fuller.

A loyal

A loyal heart may be landed under Traitor'sbridge.

This is a bridge under which is an entrance into the Tower, over against Pink-gate, formerly fatal to those who landed there, there being a muttering that such never came forth alive; as dying, to say no worse, therein, without any legal trial. Queen Elizabeth, according to Fox, in his Acts and Monuments, when sent by her sister Mary to the Tower, objected to landing here; but her conductor, a lord, whom he does not mention, would not indulge her in the choice, but obliged her to submit.

The drift of this proverb is to caution us against believing persons guilty of an offence or crime before it is proved, as many an honest man has been unjustly accused and imprisoned.

To cast water in the Thames.

That is, to give to those who have already plenty: but, with respect to the Thames, there have been times when throwing water into it would not have been an unnecessary act; for, in the fourth of William Rufus, A.D. 1158, the water was so low, that men walked across it dry-shod; and, in 1582, a strong wind, blowing west-and-by-south, forced out the fresh, and kept back the salt water. It is also possible the same want of water may in future happen, from the many bridges, wharfs, causeways, and other impediments, that obstruct the free influx of the tide.

L O N D O N.

All goeth down Gutter-lane.

That is, the throat. This proverb is applicable to those who spend all their substance in eating and drinking.

Guthurun-lane, named from a person who once owned it, is vulgarly pronounced Gutter-lane; though some say it obtained that appellation from its resemblance, on account of the narrowness, to the throat or gullet. It leads out of Cheapside, east of Foster-lane, and was anciently inhabited by gold-beaters.

You are all for the Hoistings (or Hustings).

That is, you all wish to be rulers. The court of hustings is the principal court in the city of London. It is named from being hoisted or elevated above the common level.

They agree like the clocks of London.

That is, not at all.

*Gray's-inn for walks, Lincoln's-inn for a wall,
The Inner Temple for a garden, and the Middle

All these were excellent of their kind, and peculiarly so at the time this proverb was made.

St.

L O N D O N.

St. Peter le Poor,

Where's no tavern, 'alehouse, or sign at the door.

Great part of this parish belonged to the Augustine friars, who professed wilful poverty: hence the appellation of Poor. It was chiefly inhabited by rich wholesale merchants, who probably did not use signs, like the retailers and shopkeepers.

To dine with Duke Humphrey.

This proverb, Fuller says, has altered its meaning. At first it meant dining at another man's table; for Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, commonly called the good Duke, kept an open table, where any gentleman was welcome to dine. After his decease, to dine with Duke Humphrey meant to go dinnerless; his table, above mentioned, having ceased at his death. Fuller says, that persons who loitered about in St. Paul's church during dinner-time, were said to dine with Duke Humphrey, from a mistaken notion that he was buried there.

I will use you as bad as a few.

The horrid exactions and cruelties practised on this people by our forefathers, would justify the idea that they were, themselves, in these instances, but very bad Christians.

A proverb used in commendation of a chearful and frugal meal; which, though not so luxurious, is full as comfortable, and more wholesome, than a Lord-mayor's feast.

A Tangierine.

A debtor confined in a room in Newgate called Tangiers. See Hell upon Earth, or the Delectable History of Whittington's College, folio, 1703.

He has studied at Whittington's college.

That is, he has been confined in Newgate, which was rebuilt A. D. 1423, according to the will of Sir Richard Whittington; by John Coventry, John Carpenter, John White, and William Grove, his executors. See Maitland's History of London.

Paddington-fair.

An execution at Tyburn; which place is in, or near, the parish of Paddington. The indecent behaviour of the common people assembled on these occasions, gives, to one of the most solemn and dreadful scenes imaginable, the appearance of a fair or merry-making, and tends greatly to defeat the end of punishment, which is not so much to torment the unhappy delinquent, as to deter others from committing the like crime.

A'squire of Alsatia.

A spendthrift, or sharper, inhabiting places formerly privileged from arrests. Such were White-Friars, and the Mint in Southwark, the former called Upper, the latter Lower Alsatia.

As old as Paul's.

This church was founded by King Ethelbert, A. D. 610.

As old as Paul's steeple.

An ignorant corruption of the preceding proverb; for the steeple, compared with the church, was but a modern building; it having been burnt by lightning, A. D. 1087, and afterwards rebuilt by the bishops of London.

He must take a house in Turn-again-lane.

This lane is, in old records, called Wind-again-lane; it lies in the parish of St. Sepulchre, going down to Fleet-market, formerly Fleet-ditch, having no exit at the end; from whence it obtained its name. This saying is made use of, on speaking of persons who live in an extravagant manner, spending more than their income, to whom it will be necessary to turn over a new leaf.

He is only fit for Ruffians-hall.

Fuller thus explains this proverb. A ruffian is the same with a swaggerer, so called, because endeavouring to make that side to swag or weigh down whereon he engageth. The same also with swash-buckler, from swashing or making a noise on bucklers. West Smithfield, now the horse-market, was formerly called Ruffians-hall; where such men met, casually and otherwise, to try masteries with sword and buckler. More were frightened than hurt, hurt than killed, therewith; it being accounted unmanly to strike beneath the knee; because, in effect, it was as one armed against a naked man. But since that desperate traitor, Rowland Yorke, first used the thrusting with rapiers, swords and bucklers are disused, and the proverb only applicable to quarrelsome people (not tame but wild barretters) who delight in brawls and blows.

L O N D O N.

As lame as St. Giles, Cripplegate.

St. Giles was by birth an Athenian, of noble extraction, and great estate; but he quitted all for a solitary life, becoming lame, whether by accident or otherwise is not said: he, for his greater mortification, desired not to be cured of it. He is deemed the patron of cripples, and his churches are commonly in the suburbs.

Cripplegate was so called before the conquest, from cripples begging there; for which they plead custom, from the time the lame man begged an alms of Peter and John at the beautiful gate of the temple.

The fire of London was a punishment for gluttony.

As long as Megg of Westminster.

This is applied to very tall, slender persons. Some think it alluded to a long gun, called Megg, in troublesome times brought from the Tower to Westminster, where it long remained. Others suppose it to refer to an old fictitious story of a monstrous tall virago, called Long Megg of Westminster, of whom there is a small penny-history, well known to school-boys of the lesser sort. In it there are many relations of her prowess. Whether there ever was such a woman or not, is immaterial; the story is sufficiently ancient to have occasioned the saying. Megg is there described as having breadth in proportion to her height. Fuller says, that the large grave-stone shewn on the south side of the cloister in Westminster-abbey, said to cover her body, was, as he has read in an ancient record, placed over a number of monks who died of the plague, and were all buried in one grave, that being the place appointed for the sepulture of the abbots and monks, in which no woman was permitted to be interred.
the

Middlesex

M I D D L E S E X.

Middlesex clowns.

Fuller and Ray suppose the Middlesex yeomen to have been styled clowns, from their not paying the same deference to the nobility and gentry that was shewn by the inhabitants of more remote counties, to whom the sight of them was less common. Perhaps it was likewise owing to the sudden contrast between the behaviour of the inhabitants of the metropolis, and of some of the small villages a few miles off, several of which, even at present (for instance, Greenford and the adjacent parishes), are more countryfied than the rustics of Cornwall or Northumberland.

A north-country saying, meaning I'll sue him, and make him take a journey up to town; Highgate being in the direct road from the north to London.

A saying used to express that a person preferred strong beer to small; an allusion to ancient custom, formerly observed in this village; where the landlord of the Horns, and other public-houses, used to swear all the lower order of passengers, upon a pair of horns, stuck on a stick. The substance of their oath was, That they should not kiss the maid when they could kiss the mistress, nor drink small beer when they could get strong, with divers other like

You cannot spell Yarmouth-steeple right.

THIS is a play on the word right. Yarmouth spire is awry, or crooked, and cannot be set right, or straight, by spelling. Some, who choose to go farther a-field for a meaning, consider the word spell as a verb signifying to conjure with spells, and make the meaning to be, You cannot, by any spell, set Yarmouth-spire straight or upright. The same saying is made use of for Chesterfield-spire in Derbyshire, which labours under the same defect.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

The Mayor of Northampton opens oysters with his dagger.

THAT is, in order to keep them as far off as possible from his nose. Northampton being an inland county, near the center of the kingdom, at least eighty miles from the sea, the oysters formerly brought thither were generally stale; but, since the improvement of turnpike-roads, and the introduction of the present expeditious method of travelling, his Worship, the Mayor of Northampton, may open oysters with as little offence to his nose, as his brother of Dover, or the Mayor of any other sea-port.

He that would eat a buttered faggot, let him go to Northampton.

Ray says, I have heard that King James should speak thus of Newmarket, but I am sure it may better be applied to this town, the dearest in England for fuel, where no coals can come by water, and little wood doth grow on land. This was formerly the case; but the river Nen, having many years ago been made navigable, coal-barges come up to the town, so that fuel is now to be bought at a very reasonable price.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

Brackley-breed, better to hang than feed.

Brackley was a decayed market-town and borough, in this county, and not far from Banbury, which, abounding with poor, and troubling the country about with beggars, came into disgrace with its neighbours. It was observable, that Hector, being before a rich man, fell poor of a sudden, and was besides so generally hated, that he durst never go abroad; insomuch that the proverb, to take Hector's cloak, is continued to this day among them, in the sense above mentioned.

You were born at Hog's-Norton.

Why this proverb is introduced among those of Oxfordshire, I know not; Hogs or Hogh Norton being in Leicestershire. Fuller says, this is a village, whose inhabitants, it seems, formerly, were so rustical in their behaviour, that boorish and clownish people are said to be born at Hog's-Norton. Hogh-Norton is, in English, High-Norton. In all likelihood the saying arose from the corruption of the word Hogh, or High, to Hogs, which seemed to tally with the swinish behaviour of its natives.

Oxford knives, London wives.

According to some, this saying conveyed a reflection on both, insinuating that their appearance exceeded their real worth ; that the Oxford knives were better to look at than to cut with, and that the London wives had more beauty and good-breeding than housewifely qualities.

Testons are gone to Oxford, to study at Brazen-nose.

This proverb, Fuller says, originated about the end of the reign of King Henry VIII. and ended about the middle of that of Queen Elizabeth ; so that it continued current not full fifty years. The fact alluded to was this : King Henry VIII. towards the latter end of his reign, notwithstanding the prodigious sums that had accrued to him from the dissolved abbies, being in great want of money, debased the silver coin called testers, or testons, from their having a head stamped on each side of them. These he so alloyed with copper, that, to use a conceit of that time, they seemed to blush for shame, as conscious of their own corruption : the common people, who did not distinguish between copper and brass, made use of the latter, in forming this punning adage.

This debasement of the coin, both King Edward VI. and the Queens Mary and Elizabeth, set about reforming ; and it was at length effected by the latter, as Fuller says, with no great prejudice to the then present age, and grand advantage to all posterity.

Send

OXFORDSHIRE.

Send verdingales to Broad-gates, Oxford.

This, says Fuller, will acquaint us with the female habits of former ages, used not only by the gadding Dinahs of that age, but by most sober Sarahs of the same; so cogent are common customs. With these verdingales the gowns of women, beneath their waistes, were penthoused out, far beyond their bodies; so that posterity will wonder to what purpose those bucklers of pasteboard were employed.

Some deduce the name from the Belgic verd-gard (derived, they say, from virg, a virgin, and garder, to keep or preserve), as used to secure modesty, and keep wantons at a distance. Others, more truly, fetch it from vertu and galle, because the scab and bane thereof; the first inventress thereof being known for a light housèwife, who, under the pretence of modesty, sought to cover her shame, and the fruits of her wantonneſs. These, by degrees, grew so great, that their wearers could not enter (except going sidelong) at any ordinary door; which gave occasion to this proverb. But these verdingales have been disused these forty years; whether because women were convinced in their consciences of the vanity of this, or allured in their fancies with the novelty of other fashions, I will not determine.

This seems rather a kind of prediction than a proverb; and Fuller points out some former instances, in the English annals, wherein it has been verified; but remarks that it holds not negatively, for that all was peace in Oxford previous to the breaking out of the civil commotions under King Charles I.

The case is altered, quoth Plowden.

This proverb referreth its original to Edmund Plowden, an eminent native and great lawyer of this county, though very various the relations of the occasion thereof. Some relate it to Plowden his faint pleading at the first for his client, till spurred with a better fee; which, some will say, beareth no proportion with the ensuing character of his integrity. Others refer it to his altering of his judgement upon the emergency of new matter formerly undiscovered, it being not consonic to persist in an old error, when convinced to the contrary by clear and new information. Some tell it thus: that Plowden being of the Romish persuasion, some setters trepanned him (pardon the prolepsis) to hear mass; but afterwards Plowden understanding that the pretender to officiate was no priest, but a meer layman (on design to make a discovering), "Oh, the case is altered, quoth Plowden; no priest, no mass." As for other meaner originations of this proverb, I have neither list nor leisure to attend unto them. Thus far Fuller, who seems to have missed the true origin of this saying, which is briefly this:—A tenant of Plowden's went to him, and, with a sorrowful countenance, and many awkward bows and cringes, thus opened his business. "Sir, an't please your worship, my bull has gored and killed one of your worship's oxen; I beg to know what I must do in this case?" "Why, surely, pay the value of the ox," answered Plowden; "that is both law and equity." "Very well, Sir," answered the farmer; "but I have made a little mistake in the matter; it was your worship's bull that killed my ox." "Oh, is it so? then the case is altered," quoth Plowden. This proverb is applied to those who do not chuse to do as they would be done by.
the

Proud Salopians.

This epithet is commonly given to the people of Shrewsbury. The inhabitants of this county have a kind of whining tone in their speech, much resembling that of a person in great mental distress.

You are in the highway to Needham.

That is, you are in the high road to poverty. A saying used to unthrifty persons wasting their property by extravagance. Needham is a market-town in this county. This proverb, in all likelihood, owes its origin to the similarity of sound between part of the name of this town, and need, necessity.

Beccles for a puritan, Bungay for the poor, Halesworth for a drunkard, and Bilborough for a whore.

These, probably, allude to circumstances now changed and forgotten.

Hunger will break through stone walls, or any thing but a Suffolk cheese.

Suffolk cheese is, from its poverty, the subject of much low wit. It is by some represented as only fit for making wheels for wheelbarrows; and a story is told, that a parcel of Suffolk cheese being packed up in an iron chest, and put on board a ship bound to the East-Indies, the rats, allured by the scent, eat through the chest, but could not penetrate the cheese.

Ipswich, a town without inhabitants, a river without water, streets without names, where asses wear boots.

This description of Ipswich was given to King Charles II. by the Duke of Buckingham. The meaning of it was, the town, having no manufactory, was thinly inhabited; the streets at that time were not named; at low water the bed of the river is left dry; and the bowling-green of Christ-church priory, then the seat of Lord Hereford, was rolled by asses, in a sort of boots, to prevent their feet sinking into the turf.

*The vale of Holms-Dale
Was never won, ne never shall.*

HOLMS-DALE lies partly in Surrey and partly in Kent. Several battles were formerly fought here between the Saxons and invading Danes, in which the former proved victorious; which, probably, gave rise to the proverb: but it was undoubtedly won by William the Conqueror, who marched his army through it in his way to London.

Go to Battersea to be cut for the simples.

In Battersea there are many market-gardeners, who grow medicinal herbs, termed simples, for the use of the apothecaries, who used to contract for them, and, at a particular time of the year, make a country jaunt to see them cut, which they called going to Battersea to have their simples cut; whence foolish people were jocularly advised to go thither for the same purpose, and afterwards (the origin being in some measure forgotten) to be cut for the simples.

A Lambeth Doctor.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has, it is said, the power of conferring the degree of Doctor of Divinity. This, it has been reported, was sometimes done as a matter of favour, and without examination. The term of a Lambeth Doctor is therefore a distinction from one who has regularly taken his degrees at one of the universities.

A Kent-street distrefs.

The houses in Kent-street are chiefly let to poor tenants, who pay their rent weekly; on non-payment, the rent-gatherers take away the doors of the defaulters. This saying is used to describe tenants who have nothing to seize, on whom the landlord can only make a Kent-street distrefs.

The downs near Sutton, Banstead, and Epsom, produce delicate small sheep, and the rich meadows about Carshalton are remarkable for fattening oxen. Epsom was once famous for its mineral waters, and the wells were formerly greatly resorted to, as a place of amusement, particularly by ladies of easy virtue. Ewel is a poor village, about a mile from Epsom, and is said to have harboured a number of the inferior sharpers, and other idle retainers to the wells, lodgings being there cheaper than at Epsom.

Godalmin rabbits.

This is a term of reproach to the inhabitants of this place, unjustly reflecting on them for the well-known deception practised by a Mrs. Tofts, who pretended to be delivered of live rabbits.

A retort from the people of Godalmin on the Guildfordians, in answer to the two preceding taunts. The origin of this appellation I have not ever been able to get satisfactorily explained.

Wandsworth the sink of Surrey.

This reproach is in a great measure removed. Formerly the town, which lies low, was one continued puddle.

Putney.

According to the vulgar tradition, the churches of Putney and Fulham were built by two sisters, who had but one hammer between them, which they interchanged by throwing it across the river, on a word agreed between them: those on the Surrey side made use of the words, Put it nigh; those on the opposite shore, Heave it full home; whence the churches, and from them the villages, were called Putnigh and Fullhome, since corrupted to Putney and Fulham.

He is the black bear of Arden.

GUY BEAUCHAMP, Earl of Warwick, was so called, both from his crest, which was a black bear, and from having himself a black and grim countenance, as well as on account of his being a man of undaunted courage. Arden was a forest anciently occupying all the woodland part of this county. This saying was used to express that the person spoken of, and so denominated, was really an object of terror.

As

WARWICKSHIRE.

As bold as Beauchamp.

Fuller thinks that Thomas Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, who lived in the reign of King Edward III. is the person here meant, on account of his action at Hogges in Normandy, in the year 1346, when he was the first who landed, supported only by an esquire and six archers: with these, mounted only on a palfrey, he encountered an hundred Normans, of whom he slew sixty, routed the rest, and gave means to the whole fleet to land the army in safety.

The bear wants a tail, and cannot be a lion.

Fuller thus explains this proverb. Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, derived his pedigree from the ancient Earls of Warwick; on which title he gave their crest, the bear and ragged staff: and when he was Governor of the Low Countries, with the high title of his Excellency, disusing his own coat of the green lion, with two tails, he signed all instruments with the crest of the bear and ragged staff. He was then suspected, by many of his jealous adversaries, to hatch an ambitious design to make himself absolute commander (as the lion is king of beasts) over the Low Countries; whereupon some foes to his faction, and friends to Dutch freedom, wrote under his crest, set up in public places,

Urfa caret cauda, non queat esse Leo:

The bear he never can prevail
To lion it, for lack of tail.

WARWICKSHIRE.

Nor is urfa, in the feminine, merely placed to make the verse, but because naturalists observe, in bears, that the female is always strongest.

This proverb is applied to such, who, not content with their condition, aspire to what is above their worth to deserve, or power to achieve.

He is true Coventry blue.

Coventry was formerly famous for dying a blue, that would neither change its colour, nor could it be discharged by washing; therefore the epithets of Coventry blue and true blue were figuratively used to signify persons who would not change their party or principles on any consideration.

It is done, secundum usum Sarum.

THIS proverb, says Fuller, coming out of the church, has since enlarged itself into civil use. It begun on this occasion: many offices, or forms of service, were used in several churches in England; as the office of York, Hereford, Bangor, &c. which caused a deal of confusion in God's worship; until Osmond, Bishop of Sarum, about the year of our Lord 1090, made that ordinal, or office, which was generally received all over England; so that churches, henceforward, easily understood one another, all speaking the same words in their liturgy.

It is now applied to those persons who do, and actions which are formally and solemnly done, in so regular a way, by authentic precedents, and patterns of unquestionable authority, that no just exceptions can be taken thereat.

From Hell, Hull, and Halifax,——deliver us.

This was part of the vagrant's litany. At Hull all vagrants, found begging in the streets, were whipped and set in the stocks; and at Halifax persons taken in the act of stealing cloth, were instantly, and without any process, beheaded, with an engine called a maiden. Perhaps the coincidence of the initials has been no small means towards giving currency to this saying.

*The saddler of Bawtry was hanged for leaving

A saddler of Bawtry, condemned to be hanged, refused to stop and drink, in his way to the gallows, at a house where criminals going to execution were always accustomed to refresh themselves, and stay for some time. Owing to this, his execution took place sooner than ordinary, and a reprieve obtained for him came too late.

A Scarborough warning.

That is, a word and a blow, and the blow first. This proverb, according to Fuller, alludes to an event which happened at that place, A. D. 1557, when Thomas Stafford seized on that castle (which was in a defenceless state) before the townsmen had the least notice of his approach. However, within six days, by the diligence of the Earl of Westmoreland, he was taken, brought to London, and beheaded.

A Yorkshire wee-bit.

It should be a wee-bit; wee, in the Yorkshire and Northern dialects, signifies little. This means an over-plus not accounted in a reckoning, but which sometimes proves as much as all the rest. Ask a countryman in Yorkshire the distance to a particular place, his answer will generally be, So many miles, and a wee-bit; which wee or little bit is oftentimes longer than the miles reckoned.

Merry Wakefield.

What peculiar cause of mirth this town hath above others Fuller acknowledges he cannot tell, unless that it may be entitled to that epithet from its cheapness, and the plenty of good cheer. Might it not be mirrie, that is, faithful Wakefield, and allude to some event in the disputes between the houses of York and Lancaster. Mirrie-men, a term that frequently occurs in old ballads, signifying true or faithful men.

Are the three highest hills all England thorough.*

These three hills are in sight of each other: Pendle on the edge of Lancashire; Penigent and Ingleborough, near Settle, in Yorkshire, and not far from Westmoreland. These three are indeed the highest hills in England, not comprehending Wales; but, in Wales, I think, Snowden, Caderidis, and Plinlimmon, are higher.

*If Bayton-bargh, and Hambleton-hough, and

It is spoken of a covetous and insatiable person, whom nothing will content. Bayton, Hambleton, and Barton, are places between Cawood and Pontefract, in this county. Brayton-bargh is a small hill, in a plain country, covered with wood; Bargh, in the Northern dialect, is properly a horse-way up a steep hill, though here it is taken for the hill itself. Team signifies full, or satisfied.

Cleveland is that part of Yorkshire which borders upon the bishoprick of Durham, where the ways, in the winter-time, are very deep and miry, but nothing to what those of Kent and Suffex were formerly; for if one had brought forty soles thither, he would not have carried half a one away.

Winkabank is a wood, upon a hill, near Sheffield, where there are some remains of an old camp. Temple-brough stands between the Rother and the Don, about a quarter of a mile from the place where these two rivers meet. It is a square plat of ground; encompassed by two trenches. Selden often enquired for the ruins of a temple of the god Thor, which, he said, was near Rotheram. This, probably, might be it, if we allow the name for an argument. Besides, there is a pool not far from it, called Jordan-dam, which name seems to be compounded of Jar, one of the names of the god Thor, and Don, the name of the river.—Ray.

THE proverbs relative to this country are two-fold; such as the English pass on the Welsh, and such as the Welsh pass on the English. The former are here only treated of, the latter being chiefly in Welsh.

The Welsh are extremely prone to anger, and soon appeased; being, as Fuller observes, like the face of their country, full of ups and downs, elevations and depressions.

Take the original thereof:—When Roderick the Great divided Wales betwixt his three sons, into three regions (North Wales, South Wales, and Powis), he ordered that each of them should wear upon his bonnet, or helmet, a coronet of gold, being a broad lace or head-band, indented upwards, set and wrought with precious stones, called in British, talaeth; and they, from thence, the three crowned princes: but now, either the number of princes is well multiplied in Wales, or, which is truer, the honour of talaeth is much diminished; that being so called wherewith a child's head is bound uppermost on some other linen clothes. Thus we, English, have that which they call the crown, of a cap.—Fuller.

Benegridan, a Briton, is said to have carried an army over to Ireland, where his men coming to a river, which had neither bridge nor ferry, he carried them all over on his back. This proverb means, that no one should take on himself to command, who cannot protect and assist his followers.

IT will scarcely be conceived how great a number of superstitious notions and practices are still remaining and prevalent in different parts of these kingdoms, many of which are still used and alluded to even in and about the metropolis; and every person, however carefully educated, will, upon examination, find that he has somehow or other imbibed and stored up in his memory a much greater number of these rules and maxims than he could at first have imagined,

To account for this, we need only turn our recollection towards what passed in our childhood, and reflect on the avidity and pleasure with which we listened to stories of ghosts, witches, and fairies, told us by our maids and nurses: and even among those whose parents had the good sense to prohibit such relations, there is scarce one in a thousand but may remember to have heard, from some antiquated maiden aunt or cousin, the various omens that have announced the approaching deaths of different branches of the family; a copious catalogue of things lucky and unlucky; a variety of charms to cure warts, the cramp, and tooth-ach; preventatives against the nightmare; with observations relative to sympathy, denoted by shiverings, burning of the cheeks, and itchings of the eyes and elbows. The effects of ideas of this kind are not easily got the better of; and the ideas themselves rarely, if ever, forgotten.

IN former times these notions were so prevalent, that it was deemed little less than atheism to doubt them; and in many instances the terrors caused by them embittered the lives of a great number of persons of all ages, by degrees almost shutting them out of their own houses, and deterring them from going from one village to another after sun-set. The room in which the head of a family had died, was for a long time untenanted; particularly if they died without a will, or were supposed to have entertained any particular religious opinions. But if any disconsolate old maiden, or love-crossed bachelor, happened to dispatch themselves in their garters, the room where the deed was perpetrated became for ever after uninhabitable, and not unfrequently was nailed up. If a drunken farmer, returning from market, fell from Old Dobbin, and broke his neck—or a carter, under the same predicament, tumbled from his cart or waggon, and was killed by it—that spot was ever after haunted, and impassable. In short, there was scarcely a bye-lane or cross-way but had its ghost, who appeared in the shape of a headless cow or horse;
or,

or, clothed all in white, glared with its saucer eyes over a gate or stile. Ghosts of superior rank, when they appeared abroad, rode in coaches drawn by six headless horses, and driven by headless coachmen and postilions. Almost every ancient manor-house was haunted by some one at least of its former masters or mistresses; where, besides diverse other noises, that of telling money was distinctly heard: and as for the churchyards, the number of ghosts that walked there, according to the village computation, almost equalled the living parishioners: to pass them at night, was an achievement not to be attempted by any one in the parish, the sextons excepted, who perhaps being particularly privileged, to make use of the common expression, never saw any thing worse than themselves.

TERRIBLE and inconvenient as these matters might be, they were harmless, compared with the horrid consequences attending the belief of witchcraft, which, to the eternal disgrace of this country, even made its way into our courts of judicature, and pervaded and poisoned the minds of the judges. At present, no one can, without a mixture of shame, remorse, and indignation, read of hundreds of poor innocent persons who fell victims to this ridiculous opinion, and who were regularly murdered under the sanction of, and with all the forms of, the law. Sometimes, by the combination of wicked and artful persons, these notions were made stalking-horses to interest and revenge.

THE combinations here alluded to, were practised by some popish priests during the reign of King James I. who was himself a believer in witchcraft. These priests, in order to advance the interest of their religion, or rather their own emolument, pretended to have the power of casting out devils from demoniacs and persons bewitched; and for this purpose suborned some artful and idle youths and wenches to act the part of persons bewitched, and to suffer themselves to be dispossessed by their prayers, and sprinklings with holy water. In order to perform these parts, they were to counterfeit violent fits and convulsions, on signs given them; and, in compliance with the popular notions, to vomit up crooked nails, pins, needles, coals, and other rubbish, privately conveyed to them.* It was, besides, generally thought necessary to accuse some person of having bewitched them; a poor superannuated man, or peevish old woman, was therefore pitched on, whose detection, indictment, and execution, were to terminate the villany. Luckily these combinations were at length discovered and exposed; but it must make the blood of every humane person thrill with horror, to hear that in New England there were at one time upwards of three hundred persons all imprisoned for witchcraft. Confuted and ridiculed as these opinions have lately been, the seeds of them still remain in the mind, and at different times have attempted to spring forth; witness the Cock-lane Ghost, and the disturbance at Stockwell. Indeed it is within these very few years that witchcraft has been erased from among the crimes cognizable by a jury.

G H O S T S.

A GHOST is supposed to be the spirit of a person deceased, who is either commissioned to return for some especial errand, such as the discovery of a murder, to procure restitution of lands or money unjustly withheld from an orphan or widow—or, having committed some injustice he howled, barked, and counterfeited the most violent convulsions, occasionally swearing and blaspheming in a manner too shocking to repeat: at other times he sung several jovial and hunting songs, in different voices. But what seems the most extraordinary, is, that seven clergymen were found (one to each devil) so extremely weak and credulous as to be imposed on by this nonsense, and seriously to join in expelling these evil spirits by prayer; and one of them carried it still farther, by returning publick thanks in Yatton church for the success of their endeavours, and the happy delivery of their patient.

whilst living, cannot rest till that is redressed. Sometimes the occasion of spirits revisiting this world, is to inform their heir in what secret place, or private drawer in an old trunk, they had hidden the title-deeds of the estate; or where, in troublesome times, they buried their money and plate. Some Ghosts of murdered persons, whose bodies have been secretly buried, cannot be at ease till their bones have been taken up, and deposited in consecrated ground, with all the rites of Christian burial. This idea is the remains of a very old piece of Heathen Superstition: The Ancients believed that Charon was not permitted to ferry over the Ghosts of unburied persons, but that they wandered up and down the banks of the river Styx for an hundred years, after which they were admitted to a passage. This is mentioned by Virgil:

*Hæc omnis quam cernis, inops inhumataque turba est :
Portitor ille, Charon ; hi quos vehit unda, sepulti.
Nec ripas datur horrendas, nec rauca fluentia,
Transportare prius quam sedibus ossa quierunt.
Centum errant annos, volitantque hæc littora circum :
Tum, demum admissi, stagna exoptata revisunt.*

SOMETIMES Ghosts appear in consequence of an agreement made, whilst living, with some particular friend, that he who first died should appear to the survivor.

GLANVIL tells us of the Ghost of a person who had lived but a disorderly kind of life, for which it was condemned to wander up and down the earth, in the company of evil spirits, till the day of judgment.

IN most of the relations of Ghosts, they are supposed to be mere ærial beings, without substance, and that they can pass through walls and other solid bodies at pleasure. A particular instance of this is given, in Relation the 27th, in Glanvil's Collection, where one David Hunter, neatherd to the Bishop of Down and Connor, was for a long time haunted by the apparition of an old woman, whom he was by a secret impulse obliged to follow whenever she appeared, which he says he did for a considerable time, even if in bed with his wife: and because his wife could not hold him in his bed, she would go too, and walk after him till day, though she saw nothing; but his little dog was so well acquainted with the apparition, that he would follow it as well as his master. If a tree stood in her walk, he observed her always to go through it.—Notwithstanding this seeming immateriality, this very Ghost was not without some substance; for, having performed her errand, she desired Hunter to lift her from the ground; in the doing of which, he says, she felt just like a bag of feathers.—We sometimes also read of Ghosts striking violent blows; and that, if not made way for, they overturn all impediments, like a furious whirlwind. Glanvil mentions an instance of this, in Relation 17th, of a Dutch lieutenant, who had the faculty of seeing Ghosts; and who, being prevented making way for one which he mentioned to some friends as coming towards them, was, with his companions, violently thrown down, and sorely bruised. We further learn, by Relation 16th, that the hand of a Ghost is 'as cold as a clod.'

THE usual time at which Ghosts make their appearance is midnight, and seldom before it is dark; though some audacious spirits have been said to appear even by daylight: but of this there are few instances, and those mostly Ghosts who have been laid, perhaps in the Red Sea (of which more hereafter), and whose times of confinement were expired: these, like felons confined to the lighters, are

are said to return more troublesome and daring than before. No Ghosts can appear on Christmas eve; this Shakespeare has put into the mouth of one of his characters in Hamlet.

GHOSTS commonly appear in the same dress they usually wore whilst living, though they are sometimes clothed all in white; but that is chiefly the churchyard Ghosts, who have no particular business, but seem to appear pro bono publico, or to scare drunken rustics from tumbling over their graves.

I CANNOT learn that Ghosts carry tapers in their hands, as they are sometimes depicted, though the room in which they appear, if without fire or candle, is frequently said to be as light as day. Dragging chains is not the fashion of English Ghosts; chains and black vestments being chiefly the accoutrements of foreign spectres, seen in arbitrary governments: dead or alive, English spirits are free. One instance, however, of an English Ghost dressed in black, is found in the celebrated ballad of William and Margaret, in the following lines:

And clay-cold was her lily hand,
That held her fable browd.

This, however, may be considered as a poetical licence, used in all likelihood for the sake of the opposition of lily to fable.

IF, during the time of an apparition, there is a lighted candle in the room, it will burn extremely blue: this is so universally acknowledged, that many eminent philosophers have busied themselves in accounting for it, without once doubting the truth of the fact. Dogs too have the faculty of seeing spirits, as is instanced in David Hunter's relation, above quoted; but in that case they usually shew signs of terror,

terror, by whining and creeping to their master for protection: and it is generally supposed that they often see things of this nature when their owner cannot; there being some persons, particularly those born on a Christmas eve, who cannot see spirits.

THE coming of a spirit is announced, some time before its appearance, by a variety of loud and dreadful noises; sometimes rattling in the old hall like a coach and six, and rumbling up and down the stair-case like the trundling of bowls or cannon balls. At length the door flies open, and the spectre stalks slowly up to the bed's foot, and opening the curtains, looks stedfastly at the person in bed by whom it is seen; a ghost being very rarely visible to more than one person, although there are several in company. It is here necessary to observe, that it has been universally found by experience, as well as affirmed by diverse apparitions themselves, that a Ghost has not the power to speak till it has been first spoken to; so that, notwithstanding the urgency of the business on which it may come, every thing must stand still till the person visited can find sufficient courage to speak to it: an event that sometimes does not take place for many years. It has not been found that female Ghosts are more loquacious than those of the male sex, both being equally restrained by this law.

THE mode of addressing a Ghost, is by commanding it, in the name of the Three Persons of the Trinity, to tell you who it is, and what is its business: this it may be necessary to repeat three times; after which it will, in a low and hollow voice, declare its satisfaction at being spoken to, and desire the party addressing it not to be afraid, for it will do him no harm. This being premised, it it commonly enters into its narrative ; which being completed, and its request or commands given, with injunctions that they be immediately executed, it vanishes away, frequently in a flash of light ; in which case, some Ghosts have been so considerate as to desire the party to whom they appeared to shut their eyes : sometimes its departure is attended with delightful music. During the narration of its business, a Ghost must by no means be interrupted by questions of any kind ; so doing is extremely dangerous : if any doubts arise, they must be stated after the spirit has done its tale. Questions respecting its state, or the state of any of their former acquaintance, are offensive, and not often answered ; spirits, perhaps, being restrained from divulging the secrets of their prison-house. Occasionally spirits will even condescend to talk on common occurrences, as is instanced by Glanvil in the apparition of Major George Sydenham to Captain William Dyke, Relation 10th, wherein the Major reproved the Captain for suffering a sword which he had given him to grow rusty ; saying, ‘ Captain, Captain, this sword did not use to be kept after this manner when it was mine.’ This attention to the state of arms was a remnant of the Major’s professional duty when living.

It is somewhat remarkable that Ghosts do not go about their business like persons of this world. In cases of murder, a Ghost, instead of going to the next justice of the peace, and laying its information, or to the nearest relation of the person murdered, appears to some poor labourer who knows none of the parties, draws the curtains of some decrepit nurse or alms-woman, or hovers about the place where his body is deposited. The same circuitous mode is pursued with respect to redressing injured jured orphans or widows ; when it seems as if the shortest and most certain way would be, to go to the person guilty of the injustice, and haunt him continually till he be terrified into a restitution. Nor are the pointing out lost writings generally managed in a more summary way ; the Ghost commonly applying to a third person, ignorant of the whole affair, and a stranger to all concerned.—But it is presumptuous to scrutinize too far into these matters : Ghosts have undoubtedly forms and customs peculiar to themselves.

If, after the first appearance, the persons employed neglect, or are prevented from, performing the message or business committed to their management, the Ghost appears continually to them, at first with a discontented, next an angry, and at length with a furious countenance, threatening to tear them in pieces if the matter is not forthwith executed ; sometimes terrifying them, as in Glanvil's Relation 26th, by appearing in many formidable shapes, and sometimes even giving them a violent blow. Of blows given by Ghosts there are many instances, and some wherein they have been followed with an incurable lameness.

It should have been observed that Ghosts, in delivering their commissions, in order to ensure belief, communicate to the persons employed some secret, known only to the parties concerned and themselves, the relation of which always produces the effect intended.—The business being completed, Ghosts appear with a cheerful countenance, saying they shall now be at rest, and will never more disturb any one ; and, thanking their agents, by way of reward communicate to them something relative to themselves, which they will never reveal.

SOME-

SOMETIMES Ghosts appear, and disturb a house, without deigning to give any reason for so doing: with these, the shortest and only way is to exorcise, and eject them; or, as the vulgar term is, lay them. For this purpose there must be two or three clergymen, and the ceremony must be performed in Latin; a language that strikes the most audacious Ghost with terror. A Ghost may be laid for any term less than an hundred years, and in any place or body, full or empty; as, a solid oak—the pommel of a sword—a barrel of beer, if a yeoman or simple gentleman—or, if an esquire or a justice, in a pipe of wine. But of all places, the most common, and what a Ghost least likes, is the Red Sea; it being related, in many instances, that Ghosts have most earnestly besought the exorcists not to confine them in that place. It is nevertheless considered as an indisputable fact, that there are an infinite number laid there, perhaps from its being a safer prison than any other nearer at hand; though neither history nor tradition gives us any instance of Ghosts escaping or returning from this kind of transportation before their time.

HAVING thus given the most striking outlines of the popular Superstitions respecting Ghosts, I shall next treat of another species of human apparition, which, though it something resemble it, does not come under the description of a Ghost. These are the exact figures and resemblances of persons then living, often seen not only by their friends at a distance, but many times by themselves; of which there are several instances in Aubery's Miscellanies: one, of Sir Richard Napier, a physician of London, who being on the road from Bedfordshire to visit a friend in Berkshire, saw at an inn his own apparition lying on the bed as a dead corpse; he nevertheless went forward, and died in a short time: another, of Lady Diana Rich, daughter of the Earl of Holland, who met her own apparition walking in a garden at Kensington, and died a month after of the small-pox. These apparitions are called Fetches, or Wraiths, and in Cumberland, Swarths; they most commonly appear to distant friends and relations, at the very instant preceding the death of the person whose figure they put on. Sometimes, as in the instances above mentioned, there is a greater interval between the appearance and death.

W I T C H E S.

A WITCH is almost universally a poor, decrepit, superannuated woman, who, being in great distress, is tempted by a man clothed in a black coat or gown; sometimes, as in Scotland, wearing also a bluish band and hand-cuffs, that is, a kind of turn-up linen sleeve: this man promises her, if she will sign a contract to become his, both soul and body, she shall want for nothing, and that he will revenge her upon all her enemies. The agreement being concluded, he gives her some trifling sum of money, from half-a-crown down to four-pence, to bind the bargain; then cutting or pricking her finger, causes her to sign her name, or make a cross as her mark, with her blood, on a piece of parchment: what is the form of these contracts, is no where mentioned. In addition to this signature, in Scotland, the Devil made the Witches put one hand to the sole of their foot, and the other to the crown of their head, thereby signifying they were entirely his. In making these bargains there is sometimes a great deal of haggling, as is instanced in the account of the negotiation between Oliver Cromwell and the Devil, before the battle of Worcester, published in Echard's History of England. Before the Devil quits his new recruit, he delivers to her an imp or familiar, and sometimes two or three; they are of different kinds and forms, some resembling a cat or kitten, others a mole, a miller fly, or some other insect or animal: these are to come at her call, to do such mischief as she shall direct them; at stated times of the day they suck her blood, through teats on different parts of her body: these on inspection appear red and raw. Feeding, suckling, or rewarding these imps, was by law declared felony.

THERE are, it is held, three sorts of Witches. The first can hurt, but not help: these, from their diabolical qualities, are called Black Witches. The second sort can help, but not hurt: these are unhappy persons, who, for the power of curing diseases, finding stolen goods, and doing other acts of utility, for which they take money, become bond slaves to the Devil; they are at continual enmity with the Black Witches, insomuch that one or the other often fall a sacrifice to their wicked arts: these are commonly styled White Witches. The third sort are those who can both help and hurt; and, as they seem a sort of mixture between White and Black, and wanting a name, may, without any great impropriety, be named Grey Witches,

BUT

BUT to return to the common Witch, which seems of the black sort, we do not find that, in consequence of her wicked compact, she enjoys much of the good things of this world, but still continues in abject penury. Sometimes indeed she, in company with others of her sisterhood, are carried through the air on brooms, spits, &c. to distant meetings, or sabbaths, of Witches; but for this they must anoint themselves with a certain magical ointment, given them by the Devil.

AT these meetings they have feasting, music, and dancing, the Devil himself sometimes condescending to play on the pipe, or cittern; and some of them have carnal copulation with him, the produce of which is toads and serpents: sometimes the Devil, to oblige a male Witch or Wizard, of which there are some few, puts on the shape of a woman. Mr. Sinclair tells us, in his book intitled The Invisible World, that one William Barton, who, with his wife, was burnt in Scotland for Witchcraft, confessed that he lay with the Devil in the shape of a gentlewoman, and had fifteen pounds of him in good money; but this he again denied before his execution. His wife confessed that the Devil went before them to a dancing, in the shape of a dog, playing upon a pair of pipes; and, coming down the hill back again, he carried the candle in his bottom, under his tail, which played ey wig wag, wig wag: that, she said, was almost all the pleasure she ever had. Generally, before the assembly breaks up, they all have the honour of saluting Satan's posteriors, who, for that ceremony, usually appears under the figure of a he-goat, though in Scotland it was performed when he appeared under the human form. In their way to and from these meetings, they sometimes sing or repeat certain barbarous words: in going, they use these words—tout, tout a tout, tout-tought, throughout and about; in returning, rentum tormentum. In Scotland it was confessed and depofed, that, at some of these meetings, the Devil got up into the pulpit, and preached a sermon in a voice hough and gustie; and afterwards caused the Witches to open several graves, out of which they took part of the body, the joints of the fingers and toes, with some of the winding-sheet: this was to prepare a powder for magical uses.

IT now and then happens that Satan, being out of humour, or for diversion, beats the Witches black and blue with the spits and brooms, the vehicles of their transportation, and plays them divers other unlucky tricks. Any one repeating the name of God, instantly puts the whole assembly to flight.

HERE likewise the Devil distributes apples, dishes, spoons, or other trifles, to those Witches who desire to torment any particular person; these they present to them, and thereby obtain a power over them.

WHEN a Witch wishes to destroy any one to whom she bears an ill-will, she and her sister Witches make an image of wax, which, with many ceremonies, is baptized by the Devil, and named after the person meant to be injured; they then stick thorns into it, and set it before a fire: and, as the wax melts by the heat, so the body of the person represented decays by sickness, with great torture, having the sensation of thorns stuck into his or her flesh.

ON some occasions, Witches content themselves with a less cruel revenge, and only oblige the objects of their anger to swallow pins, crooked nails, dirt, cinders, and trash.

trash of all sorts, which they invisibly convey to them, or send them by their imps. Frequently they shew their spite by drying up cows, and killing oxen; which last they have particular power to do, because, as the Apostle says, Doth God take care of oxen? 1 Cor. ix. 9. For any slight offence, they prevent butter from coming in the churn, or beer from working.

WITCHES, in vexing persons, sometimes send a number of evil spirits into them; these, as they (that is, the spirits) have informed several exorcists, are also of different ranks and degrees. In one Sarah Williams were these: Killico, Hob, and a third anonymous; Coronell Portorichio, Frateretto, Fliberdiggibbet, Horberdidance, Tocabatto, and Lusty Jolly Jenkin, Puffe and Purre, Lustie Dickie Cornerd Cappe, Nurre, Molken, Wilken, Helemodion, and Kelliecocum. Besides these, there were in others Captain Pippen, Captain Philpot, Captain Maho, and Captain Seforce: these were all leaders. There were also sometimes, with these Captains, divers private spirits; as in a Mr. Trayford there were, Hilco, Smalkin, Hillie, Hlachto, and Lustie Huff Cap. All these may be found in a book intitled Egregious Popish Impostures, &c. practised by Edmunds, alias Weston, a Jesuit, &c. published in 1603, p. 49, 50.

One Mother Samuel, the Witch of Warbois, had nine spirits that belonged to her and her family; two of their names are forgotten, but those of the other seven were Pluck, Hardname, Catch—three of the name of Smack, who were cousins—and one called Blew. These spirits used to converse freely with the children of Mr. Throgmorton, whose house they troubled. The following was a dialogue which passed between the eldest daughter, a girl of about seventeen, and one of the Smacks, whom she supposed in love with her.—‘From whence come you,’ ‘Mr. Smack, and what news do you bring?’ The spirit answered that “he came from fighting.”—‘From fighting!’ said she; ‘with whom, I pray you?’ The spirit answered, “With Pluck.”—‘Where did you fight, I pray?’ said she. The spirit answered, “In his old dame’s back-house,”—which is an old house standing in Mother Samuel’s yard; and they fought with great cowl staves this last night.—‘And who got the mastery, I pray you?’ said she. He answered, “that he broke Pluck’s head.”—Said she, ‘I would that he had broke your neck also.’ Saith the spirit, “Is that all the thanks I shall have for my labour?”—‘Why,’ saith she, ‘do you look for thanks at my hand? I would you were all hanged up, one against another, and Dame and all, for you are all naught: but it is no matter,’ said she; ‘I do not well to curse you; for God, I trust, will defend me from you all.’—So he departed, and bade farewell.—Soon after, she sees Pluck coming with his head hanging down; and he told her again of the battle, and how his head was broke. When he was gone, Catch, she said, came limping with a broken leg; and, after him, Blew brought his arm in a string: but they threatened that, when they should be well, they would join together, and be revenged of Smack. Next time that Smack came, she told him of their design; but he set them at light: he bragged that he could beat two of them himself, and his cousin Smack would be on his side.

I WILL not tire the Reader with any more of this miserable nonsense: but what can we think of a court of judicature, that would permit such stuff to be repeated before—before them as evidence? Nevertheless this, and such like, was deemed sufficient to condemn a man, his wife, and daughter, who were all executed. The old woman, it is said, confessed her guilt; but it is likewise believed she was, at that time, from the vexation and experiments she had undergone by way of trial, rendered insane.

FREQUENTLY Witches, in vexing the parties troubled, were visible to them only; and, when they have struck at them with a knife, or other weapon, the Witches have been found to have received a hurt in the part where their apparitions were struck.

SCRATCHING or pricking a Witch, so as to draw blood of her, prevents her having any power over the person that does it, provided it is done before any spell has taken place: and it may be done by proxy, for one's child; provided, at the time, it is said to be done on the child's account, or for its sake.

WITCHES, perhaps for the sake of air and exercise, or to vex squire, justice, and parson, of the village wherein they reside, often transform themselves into hares, and lead the hounds and huntsman a long and fruitless chase: though this is sometimes attended with danger to themselves, as appears from the account of the trial of Julian Cox, published by Glanvil; wherein it was deposed, by the huntsman, that, having chased a hare till it was fairly run down, he slept before the hounds to take it up; when, to his great amazement, instead of a hare, he found old Julian! breathless, and grovelling on the earth, with her globes upwards; for so he termed her backside.

THERE are various experiments and trials for discovering a Witch. One, by weighing her against the church Bible, which, if she is guilty, will preponderate: another, by

by making her attempt to say the Lord's Prayer; this no Witch is able to repeat entirely, but will omit some part or sentence thereof. It is remarkable, that all Witches do not hesitate at the same place; some leaving out one part, and some another.

TEATS, through which the imps suck, are indubitable marks of a Witch; these, as has before been observed, are always raw, and also insensible; and, if squeezed, sometimes yield a drop of blood.

A WITCH cannot weep more than three tears, and that only out of the left eye: this want of tears was, by the witch-finders, and even by some judges, considered as a very substantial proof of guilt.

SWIMMING a Witch is another kind of popular ordeal generally practised: for this, she must be stripped naked, and cross bound, the right thumb to the left toe, and the left thumb to the right toe: thus prepared, she is thrown into a pond or river, in which, if guilty, she cannot sink; for having, by her compact with the Devil, renounced the benefit of the water of baptism, that element, in its turn, renounces her, and refuses to receive her into its bosom.

SIR Robert Filmer mentions two other tests, by fire: the first, by burning the thatch of the house of the suspected Witch; the other, burning any animal supposed to be bewitched by her, as a hog or ox: these, it was held, would force a Witch to confess.

THE trial by the stool, was another method used for the discovery of Witches; it was thus managed: Having taken the suspected Witch, she is placed in the middle of a room, upon a stool or table, cross-legged, or in some other uneasy posture; to which if she submits not, she is then bound with cords: there is she watched, and kept without

without meat or sleep, for the space of four-and-twenty hours (for, they say, within that time they shall see her imp come and suck). A little hole is likewise made in the door, for imps to come in at; and, lest it should come in some less discernible shape, they that watch are taught to be ever and anon sweeping the room, and, if they see any spiders or flies, to kill them; and, if they cannot kill them, then they may be sure they are imps.

IF Witches, under examination or torture, will not confess, all their apparel must be changed, and every hair of their body shaven off with a sharp razor, lest they secrete magical charms to prevent their confessing. Witches are most apt to confess on Fridays.

IN England, Witchcraft has been chiefly confined to women; the reason assigned is, that the Devil having experienced, in the temptation of Eve, the facility with which that sex are led astray—and also found that, when they once deviate from the paths of virtue, they become more wicked than men—he therefore makes his attacks on them, in preference to the other sex.

NOT only women, but even little children, have been convicted of Witchcraft in Sweden; as may be seen in the account printed in Glanvil.

SOME hair, the parings of the nails, and urine, of any person bewitched—or, as the term is, labouring under an evil tongue—being put into a stone bottle, with crooked nails, corked close, and tied down with wire, and hung up the chimney, will cause the Witch to suffer the most acute torments imaginable, till the bottle is uncorked, and the mixture dispersed; insomuch that they will even risk a detection, by coming to the house, and attempting to pull down the bottle.

ON meeting a supposed Witch, it is adviseable to take the wall of her in a town or street, and the right hand of her in a lane or field ; and, whilst passing her, to clench both hands, doubling the thumbs beneath the fingers : this will prevent her having a power to injure the person so doing at that time. It is well to salute a Witch with civil words, on meeting her, before she speaks. But no presents of apples, eggs, or any other thing, should be received from her on any account.

SOME persons, born at particular times, and under certain combinations of the planets, have the power of distinguishing Witches at first sight. One of these persons, named Mathew Hopkins, of Manningtree, in Essex, with a John Stern, and a woman in their company, were, in 1644, permitted to go round, from town to town, through most parts of Essex, Suffolk, and Huntingdonshire, with a sort of commission to discover Witches ; nay, it is said, were paid twenty shillings for each town they visited. Many persons were pitched upon by them, and through their means convicted : till at length some gentlemen, out of indignation at Hopkins's barbarity, tied him in the manner he had bound others, that is, thumbs and toes together ; in which state, putting him into the water, he swam. This cleared the country of them.

The following statute, enacted the 1st of King James I. will shew that the belief of most of the articles here related was not confined to the populace ; nor was it repealed till the 9th year of the reign of King George I.

‘ ANY one that shall use, practise, or exercise any invocation or conjuration of any evill or wicked spirit, or ‘ consult, covenant with, entertaine or employ, feede or ‘ reward, any evill or wicked spirit, to or for any intent
 . ‘ or

‘ or purpose; or take up any dead man, woman, or child, ‘ out of his, her, or their grave, or any other place where ‘ the dead body resteth, or the skin, bone, or other part
 ‘ of any dead person, to be employed or used in any man‘ ner of witchcraft, forcery, charme, or enchantment;
 ‘ or shall use, practise, or exercise any witchcraft, enchant‘ ment, charme, or forcery, whereby any person shall be ‘ killed, destroyed, wasted, consumed, pined, or lamed,
 ‘ in his or her body, or any part thereof, such offenders,
 ‘ duly and lawfully convicted and attainted, shall suffer ‘ death.

‘ If any person shall take upon him, by witchcraft, ‘ enchantment, charme, or forcery, to tell or declare in ‘ what place any treasure of gold or silver should or might ‘ be found or had in the earth, or other secret places, or ‘ where goods or things lost or stolne should be found or ‘ become; or to the intent to provoke any person to un‘ lawful love; or whereby any cattell or goods of any ‘ person shall be destroyed, wasted, or impaired; or to ‘ destroy or hurt any person in his or her body, though
 ‘ the same be not effected, &c. a yeare’s imprisonment
 ‘ and pillory, &c. and the second conviction, death.’

A WITCH cannot pursue any one beyond the middle of a running stream, so as to have any power over them beyond that limit.

SORCERERS, OR MAGICIANS.

A SORCERER, or Magician, differs from a witch in this: A witch derives all her power from a compact with the Devil; a Sorcerer commands him, and the infernal spirits, by his skill in powerful charms and invocations; and also soothes and entices them by fumigations: for the devils are observed to have delicate nostrils, abominating and flying some kinds of stinks; witness the flight of the evil spirit into the remote parts of Egypt, driven by the smell of a fish's liver burned by Tobit. They are also found to be peculiarly fond of certain perfumes; insomuch that Lilly informs us that one Evans, having raised a spirit, at the request of Lord Bothwell and Sir Kenelm Digby, and forgetting a suffumigation, the spirit, vexed at the disappointment, snatched him from out his circle, and carried him from his house, in the Minories, into a field near Battersea-causeway.

KING JAMES, in his Dæmonologia, says, ‘ The art
 ‘ of forcery consists in diverse forms of circles and con‘ jurations rightly joined together, few or more in num‘ ber, according to the number of persons conjurors (al‘ waies passing the singular number), according to the ‘ qualitie of the circle, and form of the apparition. Two ‘ principall things cannot well in that errand be wanted:
 ‘ holy water (whereby the Devill mockes the papists),
 ‘ and some present of a living thing unto him. There
 ‘ are likewise certaine daies and houres that they observe
 ‘ in this purpose. These things being all ready and pre‘ pared, circles are made, triangular, quadrangular, round, double,

' double, or single, according to the forme of the appa-
 ' rition they crave. But to speake of the diverse formes
 ' of the circles, of the innumerable characters and crosses
 ' that are within and without, and out-through the same;
 ' of the diverse formes of apparitions that the craftie spirit
 ' illudes them with, and of all such particulars in that ' action, I remit it to over many that have busied their ' heads in describing of the same, as being but curious,
 ' and altogether unprofitable. And this farre only I touch,
 ' that, when the conjured spirit appeares, which will not ' be while after many circumstances, long prayers, and ' much muttering and murmurings of the conjurors, like
 ' a papist priest dispatching a hunting masse—how soone,
 ' I say, he appeares, if they have missed one jote of all ' their rites; or if any of their feete once slyd over the ' circle, through terror of his fearfull apparition, he paies
 ' himself at that time, in his owne hand, of that due debt
 ' which they ought him, and otherwise would have de-
 ' laied longer to have paied him: I mean, he carries them
 ' with him, body and soule. If this be not now a just ' cause to make them weary of these formes of conjura-
 ' tion, I leave it to you to judge upon; considering the ' longfomeness of the labour, the precise keeping of daies
 ' and houres (as I have said), the terribleness of the ap-
 ' parition, and the present peril that they stand in, in ' missing the least circumstance or freite that they ought ' to observe: and, on the other part, the Devill is glad
 ' to moove them to a plaine and square dealing with him,
 ' as I said before.'

THIS is a pretty accurate description of this mode of conjuration, styled the Circular Method; but, with all due respect to his Majesty's learning, square and triangular circles are figures not to be found in Euclid, or any of the common writers on geometry. But, perhaps, King James learned his mathematics from the same system as Dr. Sacheverell, who, in one of his speeches or sermons, made use of the following simile: ‘ They concur like parallel lines, meeting in one common center.’

ANOTHER mode of consulting spirits was by the berryl, by means of a speculator or seer; who, to have a complete sight, ought to be a pure virgin, a youth who had not known woman, or at least a person of irreproachable life and purity of manners. The method of such consultation is this: The conjuror having repeated the necessary charms and adjurations, with the Litany, or invocation peculiar to the spirits or angels he wishes to call (for every one has his particular form), the seer looks into a chrystal or berryl, wherein he will see the answer, represented either by types or figures; and sometimes, though very rarely, will hear the angels or spirits speak articulately. Their pronunciation is, as Lilly says, like the Irish, much in the throat.

LILLY describes one of these berryls or chrystals. It was, he says, as large as an orange, set in silver, with a cross at the top, and round about engraved the names of the angels Raphael, Gabriel, and Uriel. A delineation of another is engraved in the frontispiece to Aubery’s Miscellanies.

THIS mode of enquiry was practised by Doctor Dee, the celebrated mathematician: his speculator was named Kelly. From him, and others practising this art, we have a long muster-roll of the infernal host, their different natures, tempers, and appearances. Doctor Reginald Scot has given a list of some of the chiefs of these devils or spirits, spirits, of which I shall here set down two or three, which, I dare say, the Reader will think fully sufficient.

‘ THEIR first and principal king (which is the Power of the East) is called Baell, who, when he is conjured up, appeareth with three heads; the first like a toad, the second like a man, the third like a cat. He speaketh with a hoarse voice. He maketh a man to go invisible. He hath under his obedience and rule sixty-and-six legions of devils.

‘ THE first duke under the Power of the East, is named Agares. He cometh up mildly, in the likeness of a fair old man, riding upon a crocodile, and carrying a hawk on his fist. He teacheth presently all manner of tongues; he fetcheth back all such as run away, and maketh them run that stand still; he overthroweth all dignities supernatural and temporal; he maketh earthquakes; and is of the order of virtues; having under his regimen thirty-one legions.

‘ Marbas, alias Barbas, is a great president, and appeareth in the form of a mighty lion; but, at the commandment of a conjurer, cometh up in the likeness of a man, and answereth fully as touching any thing that is hidden or secret. He bringeth diseases, and cureth them; he promoteth wisdom, and the knowledge of mechanical arts, or handicrafts; he changeth men into other shapes; and under his presidency or government are thirty-six legions of devils contained.’

THESE Sorcerers or Magicians do not always employ their art to do mischief; but, on the contrary, frequently exert it to cure diseases inflicted by witches; to discover thieves; recover stolen goods; to foretel future events, and the state of absent friends. On this account, they are frequently called White Witches.

F A I R I E S.

THIS piece of Superstition seems to come from the East, and was probably imported into Europe by some of the Crusaders; as this kind of spirits, in many instances, resembles the genii, of whom so many wonderful stories are told by the Arabians; though some derive them from the lares and larvæ of the Romans.

FAIRIES, according to the popular accounts of them, are a sort of intermediate beings between men and spirits; having bodies, with the power of rendering them invisible, and of passing them through all sorts of inclosures. They are remarkably small of stature, with fair complexions; whence they obtained the name of Fairies. Both male and female are generally clothed in green, and frequent groves, mountains, the southern sides of hills, and green meadows, where they amuse themselves with dancing, hand in hand, in a circle, by moonlight. The traces of their feet are visible next morning on the grass, and are commonly called Fairy Rings, or Circles.

FAIRIES appear to have all the passions and wants of men, but are great lovers of cleanliness and propriety, for the observance of which they frequently reward servants, by dropping money in their shoes: they likewise severely punish sluts and slovens, by pinching them black and blue. Lilly says they are likewise friends to persons of strict diet, of an upright life, and using fervent prayers to God. Fairies are particularly fond of making cakes; in the doing of which they are said to be very noisy. In Ireland, they frequently lay bannocks, a kind of oaten cakes, in the way of travellers over the mountains ; and if they do not accept of the intended favour, and eat the bannock, or at least take it up, they seldom escape a hearty beating, or something worse.

FAIRIES oft change their weakly and starveling elves, or children, for the more robust offspring of men. But this can only be done before baptism ; for which reason it is still the custom, in the Highlands, to watch by the cradles of infants most assiduously till they are christened. Children so changed have been kept for seven years. There are divers methods of discovering whether a child belongs to the Fairies or not. One is given in the following story, printed in a book intituled, A pleasant Treatise on Witchcraft.

‘ A CERTAIN woman having put out her child to nurse in the country, found, when she came to take it home, that its form was so much altered, that she scarce knew it ; nevertheless, not knowing what time might do, took it home for her own. But when, after some years, it could neither speak nor go, the poor woman was fain to carry it, with much trouble, in her arms ; and one day, a poor man coming to the door, “ God bless you, Mistress,” said he, “ and your poor child ; be pleased to bestow something on a poor man.” “ Ah ! this child,” replied she, “ is the cause of all my sorrow ;” and related what had happened ; adding, moreover, that she thought it changed, and none of her child. The old man, whom years had rendered more prudent in such matters, told her, that, to find out the truth, she should make a clear fire, sweep the hearth very clean, and place the child fast in his chair, that he might not fall, before it ; then break a dozen eggs, and place the four-and-

‘ twenty half shells before it ; then go out, and listen at ‘ the door : for, if the child spoke, it was certainly a ‘ changeling : and then she should carry it out, and leave
 ‘ it on the dunghill to cry, and not to pity it, till she heard
 ‘ its voice no more. The woman, having done all things
 ‘ according to these words, heard the child say, “ Seven “ years old was I before I came to the nurse, and four “ years have I lived since, and never saw so many milk-“ pans before.” So the woman took it up, and left it ‘ upon the dunghill to cry, and not to be pitied ; till at ‘ last she thought the voice went up into the air : and ‘ coming, found there her own natural and well-favoured ‘ child.’—The very term Changeling, now used to signify one almost an idiot, bears testimony to the current belief of these changes. As all the Fairy children were little, backward of their tongue, and seemingly idiots ; therefore stunted and idiotical children were supposed changelings.

SOME Fairies dwell in the mines, and seem to imitate the actions of the workmen ; but never, unless insulted, do them harm, but rather are of service to them. In certain silver and lead mines, in Wales, nothing is more common than these subterraneous spirits, called Knockers, who good-naturedly point out where there is a rich vein.
 These Knockers are sometimes visible. Mr. John Lewis, in his correspondence with Mr. Baxter, describes them as little-statured, and about half a yard long ; and adds, that at this very instant there are miners on a discovery of a vein of metal on his own lands, and that two of them are ready to make oath they heard these Knockers in the day-time.

IN Scotland there were a sort of domestic Fairies, from their sun-burnt complexions called Brownies : these were extremely useful, performing all sorts of domestic drudgery.

FAIRIES sometimes shoot at cattle, with arrows headed with flint-stones: these are often found, and are called elf-shots. In order to effect the cure of an animal so injured, it is to be touched with one of these elf-shots, or to be made drink the water in which one has been dipped.

THE SECOND-SIGHT.

THE Second-Sight is so called from its being a supplemental faculty of sight, added to that of common vision; whereby certain appearances, predictive of future events, present themselves suddenly and spontaneously before persons so gifted, without any endeavour or desire on their part to see them.

ACCOUNTS differ much respecting this faculty: some make it hereditary; which is denied by others. The same difference arises respecting the power of communicating it. But, according to an account from a gentleman at Strathspay to Mr. Aubrey, some of the Seers acknowledged the possibility of teaching it. This gift, or faculty, is in general rather troublesome than agreeable to the possessors of it, who are chiefly found among the inhabitants of the Highlands of Scotland, those of the Western Isles, of the Isle of Man, and of Ireland. The account sent to Mr. Aubrey says, ‘ In the Isle of Sky, especially before the Gospel came thither, several families had it by succession, descending from parents to children; and as yet there are many that have it that way: and the only way to be freed ‘ freed from it is, when a woman hath it herself, and is ‘ married to a man that hath it also, if, in the very act of ‘ delivery, upon the first sight of the child’s head, it be ‘ baptized, the same is free from it ; if not, it hath it all ‘ its life.’

THESE visions are not confined to solemn or important events. The future visit of a mountebank, or piper ; a plentiful draught of fish ; the arrival of common travellers ; or, if possible, still more trifling matters than these, are foreseen by the Seers.

Not only aged men and women have the Second-Sight, but also children, horses, and cows. Children, endowed with that faculty, manifest it by crying aloud, at the very time that a corpse appears to a Seer : of this many instances could be given. That horses possess it, is likewise plain, from their violent and sudden starting, when their rider, or a Seer in company with him, sees a vision of any kind, by night or by day. It is observable of a horse, that he will not go forwards towards the apparition, but must be led round, at some distance from the common road ; his terror is evident, from his becoming all over in a profuse sweat, although quite cool a moment before. Balaam’s ass seems to have possessed this power, or faculty ; and, perhaps, what we improperly style a startlish horse, may be one who has the gift of the Second-Sight. That cows have the Second-Sight, is proved by the following circumstance : If a woman, whilst milking a cow, happen to have a vision of that kind, the cow runs away in a great fright at the same instant, and cannot, for some time, be brought to stand quietly.

To judge of the meaning of many visions, or the time in which they will be accomplished, requires observation and experience. In general, the time of accomplishment bears some relation to the time of the day in which they are seen. Thus, visions seen early in the morning (which seldom happens), will be much sooner accomplished than those appearing at noon; and those seen at noon will take place in a much shorter time than those happening at night: sometimes the accomplishment of the last does not fall out within a year or more.
 and

THE appearance of a person wrapt in a shroud, is, in general, a prognostic of the death of the party. The time when it will happen, may be judged from the height it reaches; for if it be not seen above the middle, death is not to be expected for a year or more: but when the shroud appears closed about the head, the accomplishment is not many hours distant.

If, in a vision, a woman is seen standing near a man's left hand, she will become his wife; if there are two or three about him, he will marry them all in succession, according to their proximity. A spark of fire, falling on the belly of a married woman, predicts her delivery of a dead child; the like spark, falling on her arm, betokens she shall shortly carry a dead child. If a seat, in which a person is sitting, suddenly appears empty, although he hath not moved, this is a certain presage that such person will very shortly die.

PERSONS who have not long been gifted with Second-Sight, after seeing a vision without doors, on coming into a house, and approaching the fire, will immediately fall into a swoon. All those that have the Second-Sight do not see these appearances at the same time; but if one having this faculty designedly touches his fellow Seer, at the instant that a vision appears to him, in that case it will be seen by both.

DURING

DURING the appearance of a vision, the eyelids of some of the Seers are so erected and distended, that they cannot close them otherwise than by drawing them down with their fingers, or by employing others to do it for them.

OMENS PORTENDING DEATH.

THE howling of a dog is a certain sign that some one of the family will very shortly die.

A SCREECH-OWL flapping its wings against the windows of a sick person's chamber, or screeching at them, portends the same.

THREE loud and distinct knocks at the bed's head of a sick person, or at the bed's head or door of any of his relations, is an omen of his death.

A DROP of blood from the nose, commonly foretels death, or a very severe fit of sickness : three drops are still more ominous.

RATS gnawing the hangings of a room, is reckoned the forerunner of a death in the family.

BREAKING a looking-glass betokens a mortality in the family, commonly the master.

IF the neck of a dead child remains flexible for several hours after its decease, it portends that some person in that house will die in a short time.

A COAL in the shape of a coffin, flying out of the fire to any particular person, betokens their death not far off.

A COL-

A COLLECTION of tallow rising up against the wick of a candle, is styled a Winding-Sheet, and deemed an omen of death in the family.

BESIDES these general notices, many families have particular warnings or notices ; some by the appearance of a bird, and others by the figure of a tall woman, dressed all in white, that goes shrieking about the house. This apparition is common in Ireland, where it is called Ben-Shea, and the Shrieking Woman.

MR. PENNANT says, that many of the great families in Scotland had their dæmon, or genius, who gave them monitions of future events. Thus the family of Rothmurchas had the Bodach an Dun, or the Ghost of the Hill ; Kinchardines, the Spectre of the Bloody Hand. Gartinbeg-house was haunted by Bodach Gartin ; and Tullock Gorms by Maug Monlach, or the Girl with the Hairy Left-Hand. The synod gave frequent orders that enquiry should be made into the truth of this apparition ; and one or two declared that they had seen one that answered the description.

CORPSE CANDLES are very common appearances in the counties of Cardigan, Carmarthen, and Pembroke, and also in some other parts of Wales. They are called Candles, from their resemblance, not of the body of the candle, but the fire ; because that fire, says the honest Welchman, Mr. Davis, in a letter to Mr. Baxter, doth as much resemble material candle-lights, as eggs do eggs ; saving that, in their journey, these candles are sometimes visible, and sometimes disappear ; especially if any one comes near to them, or in the way to meet them. On these occasions they vanish, but presently appear again behind the observer, and hold on their course. If a little candle is seen,

seen, of a pale or bluish colour; then follows the corpse, either of an abortive, or some infant; if a large one, then the corpse of some one come to age. If there be seen two, three, or more, of different sizes—some big, some small—then shall so many corpses pass together, and of such ages, or degrees. If two candles come from different places, and be seen to meet, the corpses will do the same; and if any of these candles be seen to turn aside, through some bye path leading to the church, the following corpse will be found to take exactly the same way.

SOMETIMES these Candles point out the places where persons shall sicken and die. They have also appeared on the bellies of pregnant women, previous to their delivery; and predicted the drowning of persons passing a ford. All these appearances have been seen by a number of persons ready to give their testimony of the truth thereof, some within three weeks of Mr. Davis's writing the letter here quoted.

ANOTHER kind of fiery apparition peculiar to Wales, is what is called the Tan-ue, or Tan-wed. This appear-eth, says Mr. Davis, to our seeming, in the lower region of the air, straight and long, not much unlike a glaive; moves or shoots directly and level (as who should say, I'll hit), but far more slowly than falling stars. It lighteneth all the air and ground where it passeth, lasteth three or four miles, or more, for aught is known, because no man seeth the rising or beginning of it; and, when it falls to the ground, it sparkleth, and lighteth all about. These commonly announce the decease of freeholders, by falling on their lands: and you shall scarce bury any such with us, says Mr. Davis, be he but a lord of a house and garden, but you shall find some one at his burial that hath seen seen this fire fall on some part of his lands. Sometimes those appearances have been seen by the persons whose death they foretold; two instances of which Mr. Davis records, as having happened in his own family.

THE clicking of a death-watch is an omen of the death of some one in the house wherein it is heard.

A CHILD, who does not cry when sprinkled in baptism, will not live.

CHILDREN prematurely wise are not long-lived, that is, rarely reach maturity. This notion is quoted by Shakespeare, and put into the mouth of Richard III. Fond parents are, however, apt to terrify themselves, on this occasion, without any great cause: witness the mother, who gave as an instance of the uncommon sense of her boy, of only six years of age, That he, having laid his dear little hand on a red-hot poker, took it away, without any one soul alive bidding him.

CHARMS AND CEREMONIES

FOR KNOWING

FUTURE EVENTS.

ANY person fasting on Midsummer eve, and sitting in the church porch, will at midnight see the spirits of the persons of that parish, who will die that year, come and knock at the church door, in the order and succession in which they will die. One of these watchers, there being several in company, fell into a sound sleep, so that he could not be waked : whilst in this state, his ghost or spirit was seen by the rest of his companions, knocking at the church door. See Pandemonium, by R. B.

ANY unmarried woman fasting on Midsummer eve, and at midnight laying a clean cloth, with bread, cheese, and ale, and sitting down, as if going to eat, the street door being left open—the person whom she is afterwards to marry will come into the room, and drink to her by bowing ; and afterwards filling the glass, will leave it on the table, and, making another bow, retire. See Pandemonium.

ON St. Agnes' night, 21st of January, take a row of pins, and pull out every one, one after another, saying a Pater-noster on sticking a pin in your sleeve, and you will dream of him or her you shall marry.

ANOTHER method to see a future spouse in a dream :—The party enquiring must lie in a different county from that in which he commonly resides ; and, on going to bed, must knit the left garter about the right-legged stocking, letting the other garter and stocking alone ; and, as you rehearse the following verses, at every comma knit a knot :

This knot I knit,
To know the thing I know not yet ;
That I may see
The man (woman) that shall my husband (wife) be ;
How he goes, and what he wears,
And what he does all days and years.

Accordingly, in a dream, he will appear, with the insignia of his trade or profession.

ANOTHER,

ANOTHER, performed by charming the Moon, thus :—
At the first appearance of the New Moon, immediately after the new year's day (though some say any other New Moon is as good), go out in the evening, and stand over the spars of a gate or a stile, and, looking on the Moon, repeat the following lines :

All hail to the Moon ! all hail to thee !
I prithee, good Moon, reveal to me,
This night, who my husband (wife) must be.

The person must presently after go to bed, when they will dream of the person destined for their future husband or wife.

A SLICE of the bride-cake, thrice drawn through the wedding ring, and laid under the head of an unmarried man or woman, will make them dream of their future wife or husband. The same is practised in the North with a piece of the groaning cheese.

To discover a thief by the sieve and sheers :—Stick the points of the sheers in the wood of the sieve, and let two persons support it, balanced upright, with their two fingers : then read a certain chapter in the Bible, and afterwards ask St. Peter and St. Paul, if A. or B. is the thief, naming all the persons you suspect. On naming the real thief, the sieve will turn suddenly round about.

CURES AND PREVENTATIVES.

A SLUNK or abortive calf, buried in the highway over which cattle frequently pass, will greatly prevent that misfortune happening to cows. This is commonly practised in Suffolk.

A RING made of the hinge of a coffin is supposed to have the virtue of preventing the cramp.

A RUSTY sword standing by the bed-side is a remedy against the cramp.

IN Scotland, nails are driven into oaks, as a preventative and cure for the tooth-ach.

CERTAIN herbs, stones, and other substances, as also particular words written on parchment, as a charm, have the property of preserving men from wounds in the midst of a battle or engagement. This was so universally credited, that an oath was administered to persons going to fight a legal duel, ‘ That they had ne charm, ne herb of ‘ virtue.’ The power of rendering themselves invulnerable, is still believed by the Germans; it is performed by divers charms and ceremonies; and so firm is their belief of its efficacy, that they will rather attribute any hurt they may receive, after its performance, to some omission in the performance, than defect in its virtue.

A LARGE oval chrystal, set in silver, and called in Gallic the CLACH BHUAI, or Powerful Stone, is used in Scotland land for curing black cattle of the disorder called the Con-nach. It must be suspended for twenty-four hours in a large tub of water, by a rod cut for the purpose, and laid North and South. This water to be given to the infected cattle. These stones were till of late much in use in Nithsdale.

A HALTER wherewith any one has been hanged, if tied about the head, will cure the head-ach.

Moss growing on a human skull, if dried, powdered, and taken as snuff, will cure the head-ach.

A DEAD man's hand is supposed to have the quality of dispelling tumours, such as wens, or swelled glands, by stroking with it, nine times, the place affected. It seems as if the hand of a person dying a violent death was deemed particularly efficacious; as it very frequently happens that nurses bring children to be stroked with the hands of executed criminals, even whilst they are hanging on the gallows.

TOUCHING a dead body prevents dreaming of it.

THE word ABRACADABRA, written as under, and worn about the neck, will cure an ague:

A B R A C A D A B R A
 B R A C A D A B R
 R A C A D A B
 A C A D A

To cure warts:—Steal a piece of beef from a butcher's shop, and rub your warts with it; then throw it down the necessary-house, or bury it; and, as the beef rots, your warts will decay.

THE chips or cuttings of a gibbet or gallows, on which one or more persons have been executed or exposed, if worn next the skin, or round the neck, in a bag, will cure the ague, or prevent it.

A STONE with a hole in it, hung at the bed's head, will prevent the night-mare: it is therefore called a hag-stone, from that disorder, which is occasioned by a hag, or witch, sitting on the stomach of the party afflicted. It also prevents witches riding horses; for which purpose it is often tied to a stable key.

IF a tree, of any kind, is split—and weak, rickety, or ruptured children drawn through it, and afterwards the tree is bound together, so as to make it unite—as the tree heals, and grows together, so will the child acquire strength. Sir John Cullum, who saw this operation twice performed, thus describes it: ‘ For this purpose a young ash was each time selected, and split longitudinally about five feet: the fissure was kept wide open by my gardener; whilst the friend of the child; having first stripped him naked, passed him thrice through it, always head foremost. As soon as the operation was performed, the wounded tree was bound up with a packthread; and, as the bark healed, the child was to recover. The first of the young patients was to be cured of the rickets, the second of a rupture.’ This is a very antient and extensive piece of superstition.—Creeping through tolmen, or perforated stones, was a Druidical ceremony, and is practised in the East-Indies. Mr. Borlace mentions a stone, in the parish of Marden, having a hole in it, fourteen inches diameter; through which many persons have crept, for pains in their backs and limbs; and many children have been drawn, for the rickets. In the North, children are drawn through a hole

a hole cut in the groaning cheese, on the day they are christened.

THE elder tree is supposed to have the virtue of protecting persons, bearing a branch of it, from the charms of witches and wizards.

THE rown tree, or witch elm, is supposed to have the same virtue. Both these are pieces of Scotch superstition.

S Y M P A T H Y.

THE wounds of a murdered person will bleed afresh; on the body being touched, ever so lightly, in any part, by the murderer.

A PERSON being suddenly taken with a shivering, is a sign that some one has just then walked over the spot of their future grave. Probably all persons are not subject to this sensation; otherwise the inhabitants of those parishes, whose burial-grounds lie in the common foot-path, would live in one continual fit of shaking.

WHEN a person's cheek, or ear, burns, it is a sign that some one is then talking of him or her. If it is the right cheek, or ear, the discourse is to their advantage; if the left, to their disadvantage.

WHEN the right eye itches, the party affected will shortly cry; if the left, they will laugh.

THINGS LUCKY AND UNLUCKY.

IT is customary for women to offer to sit cross-legged, to procure luck at cards for their friends. Sitting cross-legged, with the fingers interlaced, was antiently esteemed a magical posture.

IT is deemed lucky to be born with a caul, or membrane, over the face. This is an antient and general superstition. In France, it is proverbial: etre né coiffée, is an expression signifying that a person is extremely fortunate. This caul is esteemed an infallible preservative against drowning; and, under that idea, is frequently advertised for sale in our public papers, and purchased by seamen. It is related that midwives used to sell this membrane to advocates, as an especial means of making them eloquent: and one Protus was accused by the clergy of Constantinople with having offended in this article. According to Chrysostom, the midwives frequently sold it for magical uses.

A PERSON possessed of a caul may know the state of health of the party who was born with it: if alive and well, it is firm and crisp; if dead or sick, relaxed and flaccid.

IT is reckoned a good omen, or a sign of future happiness, if the sun shines on a couple coming out of the church after having been married. It is also esteemed a good sign if it rains whilst a corpse is burying:

Happy is the bride that the sun shines on;

Happy is the corpse that the rain rains on.

To break a looking-glass is extremely unlucky; the party to whom it belongs will lose his best friend.

If, going a journey on business, a sow cross the road, you will probably meet with a disappointment, if not a bodily accident, before you return home. To avert this, you must endeavour to prevent her crossing you; and if that cannot be done, you must ride round on fresh ground. If the sow is attended with her litter of pigs, it is lucky, and denotes a successful journey.

It is unlucky to see, first one magpye, and then more; but to see two, denotes marriage or merriment; three, a successful journey; four, an unexpected piece of good news; five, you will shortly be in a great company. To kill a magpye, will certainly be punished with some terrible misfortune.

If, in a family, the youngest daughter should be married before her elder sisters, they must all dance at her wedding without shoes: this will counteract their ill luck, and procure them husbands.

If you meet a funeral procession, or one passes by you, always take off your hat: this keeps all evil spirits attending the body in good humour.

If, in eating, you miss your mouth, and the victuals fall, it is very unlucky, and denotes approaching sickness.

If a bread cake be taken out of the oven, and cut, all the rest of that batch will be heavy. Wiltsh.

To make a sonfy hand; i. e. a healing hand:—Hold a mole in your hand till it expires.

It is an article of the creed of every midwife in Scotland, that a girl suckled with the milk of a woman who has been delivered of a bastard, will infallibly prove as frail as her nurse; but that for a boy it is no objection, but rather rather the contrary, as it is supposed to render him a lusty champion in the wars of Venus.

IT is supposed extremely unlucky to have a dead body on board of a ship at sea.

CHILDREN are deemed lucky to a ship ; their innocence being, by the sailors, supposed a protection.

IT is lucky to put on a stocking the wrong side outwards : changing it, alters the luck.

WHEN a person goes out to transact any important business, it is lucky to throw an old shoe after him.

IT is lucky to tumble up stairs : probably this is a jocular observation, meaning, it was lucky the party did not tumble down stairs.

IT is unlucky to present a knife, scissors, razor, or any sharp or cutting instrument, to one's mistress or friend, as they are apt to cut love and friendship. To avoid the ill effects of this, a pin, a farthing, or some trifling recompence, must be taken. To find a knife or razor, denotes ill luck and disappointment to the party.

IT is unlucky to walk under a ladder ; it may prevent your being married that year.

IT is a common practice among the lower class of hucksters, pedlars, or dealers in fruit or fish, on receiving the price of the first goods sold that day, which they call hansel, to spit on the money, as they term it, for good luck : and boxers, before they set to, commonly spit in their hands, which was originally done for luck's sake.

THE first time a nurse brings a child to visit its parents or relations, it is unlucky to send it back without some gift, as eggs, salt, or bread.

IT is held extremely unlucky to kill a cricket, a lady-bug, a swallow, martin, robin red-breast, or wren ; perhaps haps from the idea of its being a breach of hospitality ; all those birds and insects taking refuge in houses.

THERE is a particular dislike in favour of the robin and wren :

A robin and a wren
Are God Almighty's cock and hen.

PERSONS killing any of the above-mentioned birds or insects, or destroying their nests, will infallibly, within the course of the year, break a bone, or meet with some other dreadful misfortune. On the contrary, it is deemed lucky to have martins or swallows build their nests under the eaves of a house, or on the chimnies.

IT is unlucky to lay one's knife and fork cross-wise : crosses and misfortunes are likely to follow.

MANY persons have certain days of the week and month on which they are particularly fortunate, and others in which they are as generally unlucky : these days are different to different persons. Mr. Aubrey has given several instances of both in divers persons. Some days, however, are commonly deemed unlucky : among others, Friday labours under that opprobrium ; and it is pretty generally held, that no new work or enterprize should be commenced on that day. Likewise respecting the weather, there is this proverb :

Friday's moon,
Come when it will, it comes too soon.

WASHING hands in the same basin, or with the same water, as another person has washed in, is extremely unlucky ; as the parties will infallibly quarrel.

To scatter salt, by overturning the vessel in which it is contained, is very unlucky, and portends quarrelling with a friend,

a friend, or fracture of a bone, sprain, or other bodily misfortune. - Indeed this may in some measure be averted, by throwing a small quantity of it over one's head. It is also unlucky to help another person to salt: to whom the ill luck is to happen, does not seem to be settled.

WHISTLING at sea is supposed to cause an increase of wind, if not a storm, and therefore much disliked by seamen; though, sometimes, they themselves practise it when there is a dead calm.

DROWNING a cat at sea is extremely unlucky.

A PRINCIPAL passenger shaving himself at sea will procure a favourable change of the wind.

FROM BURNS' POEMS.

HALLOW-E'EN is in Scotland thought to be a night when witches, devils, and other mischievous spirits, or ærial beings, are all abroad on their baneful midnight errands, particularly the fairies, who on that night are said to hold a grand anniversary. The first ceremony of Hallow-e'en is pulling each a stock or plant of kail. They must go out, hand in hand, with eyes shut, and pull the first they meet with: its being big or little, straight or crooked, is prophetic of the size and shape of the grand object of all their spells—the husband or wife. If any bird, or earth, stick to the root, that is tocher, or fortune; and the taste of the custoc, that is, the heart of the stem, is indicative of the natural temper and disposition. Lastly, the stems, or, to give them their ordinary appellation, the runts, are placed somewhere above the head of the door; and the Christian names of the people whom chance brings into the house, are, according to the priority of placing the runts, the names in question.

THE lasses go to the barn-yard, and pull each, at three several times, a stalk of oats. If the third stalk wants the top-pickle, that is, the grain at the top of the stalk, the party in question will come to the marriage-bed any thing but a maid.

BURNING the nuts is a favourite charm. They name the lad and lass to each particular nut, as they lay them in the fire; and accordingly as they burn quietly together, or start from beside one another, the course and issue of the courtship will be.

MISCELLANEOUS SUPERSTITIONS.

THE passing-bell was anciently rung for two purposes : one, to bespeak the prayers of all good Christians for a soul just departing ; the other, to drive away the evil spirits who stood at the bed's-foot, and about the house, ready to seize their prey, or at least to molest and terrify the soul in its passage : but by the ringing of that bell (for DuRANDUS informs us, evil spirits are much afraid of bells) they were kept aloof ; and the soul, like a hunted hare, gained the start, or had what is by sportsmen called Law. Hence, perhaps, exclusive of the additional labour, was occasioned the high price demanded for tolling the greatest bell of the church ; for, that being louder, the evil spirits must go farther off to be clear of its sound, by which the poor soul got so much more the start of them : besides, being heard farther off, it would likewise procure the dying man a greater number of prayers. This dislike of spirits to bells, is mentioned in the Golden Legend, by W. de Worde.

‘ It is said, the evill spirytes that ben in the region of ‘ thayre, doubte moche when they here the belles rongen :
 ‘ and this is the cause why the belles ben rongen whan it ‘ thondreth, and whan grete tempeste and outrages of ‘ wether happen, to the ende that the feindes and wycked ‘ spirytes should be abashed and flee, and cease of the ‘ movynge of tempeste.’

THE toad has a stone in its head, very efficacious in the cure of divers diseases ; but it must be taken out of the animal whilst alive.

THE

THE ass has a cross on its back, ever since Christ rode on one of those animals.

SIXTY-THREE, styled the grand climacterical year, being composed of the mystical number nine, multiplied by that of seven, is supposed to be fatal to most men; and that, having survived it, they have, to use the vulgar expression, 'taken a new lease of their lives.'

THE haddock has the mark of St. Peter's thumb, ever since St. Peter took the tribute penny out of the mouth of a fish of that species.

THE mandrake grows under gibbets whereon malefactors are exposed, being produced by the droppings from the dead body. It resembles the human figure, either male or female; and, when eradicated, sends forth a loud shriek. Pulling up a mandrake is generally fatal to the person that does it, who rarely long survives. This piece of Superstition is mentioned by Pliny, who gives a method of digging up the mandrake with impunity. This plant is supposed to remove sterility in women.

STORKS are found in republicks only. During Oliver Cromwell's protectorship, it is pretended they were in England.

MOST persons break the shells of eggs, after they have eaten the meat. This was originally done to prevent their being used as boats by witches.

A COAL hopping out of the fire, in the shape of a purse, predicts a sudden acquisition of riches to the person near whom it falls.

A FLAKE of soot hanging at the bars of the grate, denotes the visit of a stranger from that part of the country nearest the object: a kind of fungus in the candle predicts the same.

A SPARK in the candle denotes that the party opposite to it will shortly receive a letter.

IN setting a hen, the good women hold it an indispensable rule to put an odd number of eggs.

ALL sorts of remedies are directed to be taken three, seven, or nine times. Salutes with cannon consist of an odd number; a royal salute is thrice seven, or twenty-one guns. This predilection for odd numbers is very antient, and is mentioned by Virgil in the eighth Eclogue, where many spells and charms, still practised, are recorded: but, notwithstanding these opinions in favour of odd numbers, the number thirteen is considered as extremely ominous; it being held that, when thirteen persons meet in a room, one of them will die within the year.

It is impossible for a person to die whilst resting on a pillow stuffed with the feathers of a dove; but they will struggle with death in most exquisite torture. The pillows of dying persons are therefore frequently taken away, when they appear in great agonies, lest they may have pigeons feathers in them.

FERN seed is looked on as having great magical powers, and must be gathered on Midsummer eve. A person who went to gather it, reported that the spirits whisked by his ears, and sometimes struck his hat, and other parts of his body; and at length, when he thought he had got a good quantity of it, and secured it in papers and a box, when he came home, he found both empty. See Pandemonium.

ANY one wounded by a small fish, called a Sting-Ray, which often happens in catching sand-eels, will feel the pain of the wound very severely till the next tide.

THE Reverend Mr. Shaw, in the History of the Province of Moray, in Scotland, says, ‘ When a corpse is ‘ lifted

‘ lifted, the bed of straw, on which the deceased lay, is ‘ carried out, and burnt, in a place where no beast can ‘ come near it: and they pretend to find next morning, ‘ in the ashes, the print of the foot of the person in the ‘ family who shall first die.’

ALTHOUGH the Devil can partly transform himself into a variety of shapes, he cannot change his cloven foot, which will always mark him under every appearance.

IF a fire in a glass-house, or any other building, is suffered to burn for seven years, without being once extinguished during that time, a salamander will be thereby generated or produced.

WHOSOEVER does not eat goose at Michaelmas, runs a risk of wanting money all that year.

THE Devil cannot assume the shape of either a dove or a lamb: the former, from being the shape in which the Holy Ghost once appeared; the latter, from its being the figure under which Christ is often represented.

WATER preserved in fountains, was by the common people supposed to have a mystic virtue or secret power in it, to heal diseases, &c. wherefore there was a lock and key to most fountains, to prevent the water from being stolen.

A MANUSCRIPT in the Cotton Library, marked Julius, F. 6, has the following Superstitions, practised in the lordship of Gasborough, in Cleveland, Yorkshire:

ANY one whistling, after it is dark, or day-light is closed, must go thrice about the house, by way of penance. How this whistling becomes criminal, is not said.

WHEN any one dieth, certain women sing a song to the dead body, reciting the journey that the party deceased must go.

THEY esteem it necessary to give, once in their lives, a pair of new shoes to a poor person ; believing that, after their decease, they shall be obliged to pass bare-foot over a great space of ground, or heath, overgrown with thorns and furzes ; unless, by such gift, they have redeemed this obligation : in which case, when they come to the edge of this heath, an old man will meet them, with the self-same pair of shoes they have given ; by the help of which they will pass over unhurt : that is, provided the shoes have no holes in them ; a circumstance the fabricator of the tale forgot to stipulate.

WHEN a maid takes the pot off the fire, she sets it down in great haste, and with her hands stops the pot-hooks from vibrating ; believing that our lady greeteth (that is, weepeth) all the time the pot-hooks are in motion.

BETWEEN the towns of Aten and Newton, near the foot of Rosberrye Toppinge, there is a well dedicated to St. Oswald. The neighbours have an opinion, that a shirt, or shift, taken off a sick person, and thrown into that well, will shew whether the person will recover, or die : for if it floated, it denoted the recovery of the party ; if it sunk, there remained no hope of their life : and, to reward the Saint for his intelligence, they tear off a rag of the shirt, and leave it hanging on the briars thereabouts ; ‘ where,’ says the writer, ‘ I have seen such numbers, as might have ‘ made a fayre rhyme in a paper myli.’ These wells, called Rag-wells, were formerly not uncommon. Something like them is mentioned by Mr. Hanway, in his Travels in Persia, vol. i. p. 177 ; where he says, ‘ After ‘ ten days journey, we arrived at a desolate carravanera, where we found nothing but water. I observed a tree with a number of rags tied to the branches : these were so many charms, which passengers coming from Ghilan, a province remarkable for agues, had left there, in a fond expectation of leaving this disease also on the same spot.’ The Reverend Mr. Brand, in his ingenious Annotations on Bourne’s Popular Antiquities, mentions a well of this kind at Benton, in the neighbourhood of Newcastle. Mr. Pennant tells us of two in Scotland : these were visited for many distempers ; where the offerings were small pieces of money, and bits of rags.

‘ ten

THE fishermen every year change their companions, for luck’s sake. On St. Peter’s day they new paint their boats, and give a treat to their friends and neighbours ; at which they sprinkle their boats with ale, observing certain ceremonies.

MIDSUMMER-EVE.—The Dumb-Cake, so called because it was made without speaking ; and afterwards the parties were to go backwards up stairs to bed, and put the cake under their pillow, and then they should dream of their loves. Also writing their names on a paper at twelve o’clock, burning the same, then carefully gathering up the ashes, and laying them close wrapped in a paper, upon a looking-glass, marked with a cross, under their pillows ; and this should have the same effect with the other.

THE seventh son of a seventh son is born a physician ; having an intuitive knowledge of the art of curing all disorders, and sometimes the faculty of performing wonderful cures by touching only.

To conclude this article, and my book, I shall transcribe a foreign piece of Superstition, firmly believed in many parts of France, Germany, and Spain. The account of it, and the mode of preparation, appears to have been given by a judge: in the latter, there is a striking resemblance to the charm in Macbeth.

OF THE HAND OF GLORY,

Which is made use of by housebreakers, to enter into houses at night, without fear of opposition.

I ACKNOWLEDGE that I never tried the secret of the Hand of Glory, but I have thrice assisted at the definitive judgment of certain criminals, who, under the torture, confessed having used it. Being asked, what it was, how they procured it, and what were its uses and properties?—They answered, first, that the use of the Hand of Glory was to stupify those to whom it was presented, and to render them motionless, insomuch that they could not stir, any more than if they were dead; secondly, that it was the hand of a hanged man; and, thirdly, that it must be prepared in the manner following:

TAKE the hand, left or right, of a person hanged, and exposed on the highway; wrap it up in a piece of a shroud, or winding-sheet, in which let it be well squeezed, to get out any small quantity of blood that may have remained in it; then put it into an earthen vessel, with zimat, salt-petre, salt, and long pepper, the whole well powdered; leave it fifteen days in that vessel; afterwards take it out, and expose it to the noon-tide sun in the dog-days, till it is thoroughly dry; and if the sun is not sufficient, put it into an oven heated with fern and vervain: then compose a kind

a kind of candle with the fat of a hanged man, virgin wax, and sisame of Lapland. The Hand of Glory is used as a candlestick to hold this candle, when lighted. Its properties are, that wheresoever any one goes with this dreadful instrument, the persons to whom it is presented will be deprived of all power of motion. On being asked if there was no remedy, or antidote, to counteract this charm, they said the Hand of Glory would cease to take effect, and thieves could not make use of it, if the threshold of the door of the house, and other places by which they might enter, were anointed with an unguent composed of the gall of a black cat, the fat of a white hen, and the blood of a screech-owl; which mixture must necessarily be prepared during the dog-days.
